Spain Worries
Marconi Rests
A Hitler Nightmare
Real Estate Idea Wanted

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SPAIN HAS officially declared "a nation-wide state of alarm." We have had that here since 1929.

Whether Spain will succeed in this latest of several attempts to get along without a king for a figurehead is uncertain. There is comfort in the fact that the Spanish are a proud, sensitive people, and their President might well resign for reasons that would seem trifling here. Conditions may not be so bad.

Meanwhile, ex-King Alfonso, who liked being king in spite of occasional shots fired at him, is interested.

Last Wednesday, Guiglielmo Marconi, "hard at work and in the best of health," celebrated his sixtieth birthday. The great scientist, whose achievements benefit the world and reflect glory upon his native Italy, read messages of congratulation, did his work, "then took the usual Roman siesta."

He knows, what the late Dr. Murphy of Chicago told all patients, that every man past fifty should interrupt the day's work with a complete rest, and, if possible, a few moments of sleep.

The American business man of sixty, who works steadily as long as he can stay awake, often on top of a heavy luncheon, and then goes home, "gets ready for the evening" with the help of half a dozen cocktails, need not wonder at the physical difference between himself and Marconi.

"The Stormer," a Nazi newspaper that boasts itself "the greatest anti-Semitic newspaper in the world," distributes throughout Germany huge red posters, promising to reveal in its May-Day number "a Jewish plan to murder Hitler, Jewish ritual murders, Jewish secret laws."

This looks like an attempt to foment widespread attacks on the Jews in Germany, without the slightest excuse or provocation. Every German Jew knows that an attack on Hitler would probably result in an outrage against the Jews, no matter by whom the attack might be made.

John Gunther, in "The New Republic," publishes a statement made long since by Captain Himmler, chief of the Munich police:

"The firing of any shot—whether it hit the mark or not—against our leader (Hitler) would provide unequalled chaos throughout Germany and a great pogrom."

Dr. Gunther, State geologist, announces discovery of the jaw and part of the skull of a four-tusked mastodon that roamed over Florida, when real estate was really cheap, four to five million years ago.

Col. Frank B. Shutts, editor of the Miami Herald, will give a building lot, somewhere in Florida, to anybody who can show how this discovery can best be made practically valuable to dealers in Florida real estate.

In California, travelling from Los Angeles to Santa Monica, just east of the Pacific's edge, you pass a pit of sticky asphalt, containing almost every possible kind of antediluvian monster, from carniverous dinosaur to ichtyosaurus. This antique deposit, that requires a regular bill of fare to enumerate its attractions, is said to be valuable to California real estate, showing that a California lot may yield anything, oil, gold, dinosaurs, or a valuable gasoline station.

Japan having said, "I am the boss of Asia, if you want to do any business with China, do it through me," says nothing more, leaving the western countries to interpret its statement for themselves. Britain, France and other countries are "watching the United States, to see

'MILLEN SAID HE SHOT 2,' OLD FRIEND TESTIFIES

BULLETIN

Dedham Courthouse, April 27—Gen. Daniel Needham, state police head, arrived at the courthouse this afternoon. Rose Kneller, Faber's sweetheart, visited Dist. Atty. Dewings office.

Dedham Courthouse, April 27—Old schoolmates had a reunion in a silent courtroom at trial for murder today — one glaring from the prisoners' cage, the other on the witness stand testifying against him.

Saul Messinger, from the stand, testified that Murton Millen had admitted to him that he robbed the Needham Trust Co., and shot two policemen.

There was no observance of the niceties which usually accompany alumni get-togethers.

"Murton told me he robbed a bank in Needham and got about $12-000," Messinger said. "During the robbery the alarm went off, he said, and a policeman was coming across the street and he shot him. When they left the bank they hadn't gone very far when a policeman stepped out to stop them and he shot him and kept going at the rate of about 80 miles an hour."

"You Yellow Rat!" Cries Murt to Saul

There was a recess. Judge Nelson P. Brown and the jury trying Murton and Irving Millen and Abe Faber for the burder of Patrolman Forbes McLeod left the room. Messinger walked down the aisle past the cage where the pris-

Friend Murton Called 'You Yellow Rat'

SAUL MESSINGER JOHN J. POWERS

$93,920 Back Salary Handed Them After Dole Agreement

Three hundred Everett school teachers received their first pay checks in eight weeks at the city treasurer's office late this afternoon.

The payment of salaries to the teachers was made after they had signed an agreement to contribute ten per cent to the city for the care of the needy on the welfare rolls.

The total amount of distribution was $93,920.67.

Distribution of the pay checks was begun by City Treasurer William E. Emerton immediately after the close of school this afternoon.

Today's distribution of salaries followed a controversy that has waged between Mayor James A. Roche and the school teachers for two months. The teachers had insisted they had agreed to a voluntary contribution of a portion of their pay for only one year.

When this year's budget was drawn up the teachers were again requested to contribute and they had refused.

At a secret meeting in Fairfield School all but 69 of the teachers agreed to make the requested contribution.

Mayor Roche ordered that City Treasurer Emerton make immediate preparation for the payment of back wages to those who had agreed to contribute.

GLAND SURGEON WEDS GIRL, 21

By International News Service

Bucharest, April 27—Dr. Serge Voronoff, famed for his "monkey gland" operations, and now nearly seventy years of age, was married here yesterday to Miss Hilda Schwaetz, 21, a cousin of Mme. Madga Lupescu, friend of King Carol, it was learned today.

It was Mme. Lupescu who introduced her cousni to the noted surgeon. Reports today were that Dr. Voronoff and his young bride are now on their way to Paris.

The Spirit of '76

WHEN the country learned the other day of the protest to Congress from the citizens of historic and immortal Lexington,—criticizing the invasion by the federal government of the time-honored immunities and liberties of Americans, it was everywhere felt that something of the greatest importance had occurred.

The protest was signed by 1200 citizens of Lexington. Its language was simple,—its sentences short and direct. Truth, deep feeling, fixed but patient resolves are usually so expressed.

Its effect was instantaneous. It brought to the surface of contemporary consciousness, as perhaps nothing could have done so well, the pure faith in freedom which animated the founders of the nation.

WE could see once more with the mind's vision, "the crude bridge that arched the flood,—the flag which the embattled farmers unfurled to April's breeze."

One could almost hear James Otis as he arose in court to denounce the writs of assistance, saying, "I now appear in behalf of the inhabitats of this town who have presented a petition, and out of regard to their liberties."

We could sense the scorn of the austere and upright men of those early days for the small tyrannies "which cover our waters and darken our land," and place "the liberty of every man in the hands of every petty officer."

Not only was the protest presented to Congress, but it was read at the same time on the

Children Hidden From Vermont Kidnapers

Threats to kidnap the two children of Earle V. K. Willson, wealthy coal dealer, caused the sudden convergence of Department of Justice agents in Rutland, Vt., it was learned today.

The federal agents, numbering more than 30, went to Vermont in an attempt to trap the writer of the threat and extortion notes, some of which were inter-state communications, giving the federal officers jurisdiction.

Willson, his wife and the two children, Robert, 4, and Samuel, 5, have gone to Greenwich, N. Y., 30 miles north of Troy, and are staying with relatives as a result of the threats, it was learned. His fortune is estimated at about $500,000.

BOYS FINGERPRINTED

The Rutland estate of the family, "Shadow Lane," is a French-type chateau and is adjacent to the country club where federal agents planted paper-wrapped packages purporting to contain currency.

It is declared that two caddies saw the packages and approached them, federal agents then jumping from places of concealment, capturing the lads, questioning them and releasing them.

The agents are understood, however, to have fingerprinted the high school boys during the investigation and also to have questioned a group of newsboys regarding a man supposed to have been the recipient of a code message which had been inserted in an Albany, N. Y., newspaper which circulates in Rutland.

The Rutland residents today sent the following telegram to Clarence D. McKean, chief investigator of the department in Boston, who headed the force of agents in Rutland:

DEMAND EXPLANATION

"On behalf of a startled and mystified people of this city the Rutland Herald respectfuly but earnestly calls upon you to reveal the circumstances which caused you to send groups of federal agents here, who have grilled more than 100 young men and boys innocent of any knowledge of the object sought, who have in various strange disguises, interviewed housewives and others upon obviously artificial pretexts, who were armed with automatic and machine guns with which they have actually fired upon or toward innocent residents, who have concealed their purpose from the people, press, local police and even local agents.

"This community considers that you owe it an explanation of these strange happenings and calls upon you to furnish it."

The activities of the agents led to reports that developments in the Lindbergh kidnaping case had caused the concentration of federal men about Rutland, but J. Edgar Hoover, director of the department's division of investigation, denied this at his office in Washington.

RULING SEEN AS AID TO MILLIONS

Decision in Test Case Involves Boston Market Deal

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Judge John J. Burns, in Superior Court today told the people of America they can recover the money they lost in stocks whose actual value was deliberately misrepresented to them.

The decision is of widespread consequence, possibly affecting the millions of innocent and trusting investors and the fortunes swept away from them through doubtful securities.

Raymond Piper of Springfield, himself a high-pressure stock salesman, is the immediate beneficiary of Judge Burns' momentous decision.

The immediate victims of it are Paul D. Childs and J. Amory Jeffries, who owned and operated Childs, Jeffries, Inc., once a Boston dealer in unlisted securities, now folded up.

Childs, Jeffries sponsored a chain-store investment trust. It sold the preferred stock to the public for $25 per share, bought all the common stock for $5000 and also received a service bonus in preferred

SHOWERS HALT BRAVES, SOX

Rain or cold weather halted seven of the eight major league games scheduled for this afternoon. Chicago furnished favorable weather for a meeting of the Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals.

Showers washed away the opener of a three-game series between the Braves and world's champion New York Giants at the Wigwam. The Red Sox also were kept idle by rain over in New York, where they were carded to open an engagement with the Yankees.

The Braves postponement was their first of the season.

Medford Woman Halts Congress

Washington, April 27 (AP)—Memorial services in the House were interrupted today when a woman rose in the gallery and called out that she had "a message from God." Ushered out of the gallery, she said she was Mrs. Ida Anderson of Medford, Mass., a native of Sweden.

"I have a message from God which I have to tell Congress," she said. "I can't help what I did—I had to do it. I can't tell you what the message is, I must tell it only to Congress."

She was not held and quickly disappeared in the departing crowds.

MESSINGER CLAIMS MURTON CONFESSED SHOOTING 2

Bitter Clash by Counsel Halts Witness as He Starts to Name Others Said to Have Been in Holdup

By WIN BROOKS

[illegible] sat handcuffed. Murton's cold glare followed him.

"You yellow rat!" Murton called softly as Messinger passed behind the cage. Guards heard him. If Messinger heard, he gave no sign. He did not pause or glance around. He walked out.

Messinger, the government's "ace" witness, whose appearance has been long awaited, was withdrawn from the witness stand in a surprise move by Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing after having testified only about 10 minutes.

He had reached the point where he testified Murton had told him the names of his accomplices in the crime when objection by defense counsel precipitated a long bench conference. Into this Messinger was drawn. Recess was declared. Murton called his name, and at the conclusion of recess, Dewing requested and received permission to suspend Messinger's testimony, reserving the right to call him later.

Murton's Mental Status Is Issue

Dewing and George Stanley Harvey, defense chief for the Millen brothers, announced that objection to Messinger's testimony had been made on the grounds of Murton's alleged mental incapacity, and that the government's case will be interrupted Monday long enough for defense doctor's who have examined Murton at the jail to testify to provide a basis for decision of the court.

Messinger was returned to Dedham Jail, where he is held as a material witness in $5000 bond, and New York state detectives were called to the stand to tell of the arrest of the Millen brothers.

Edmund O'Brien, first of the New York detectives called, told of Irving Millen's arrest Feb. 25, at Hotel Lincoln, New York. He identified a revolver, five shells, $378 and a check issued at the Washington railroad terminal, as having been found on Irving.

In low, matter-of-fact tones he told how Messinger approached Irving in the hotel lobby and how he and State Detective John Stokes closed in—how Irving reached for a pocket and how a Burns detective found the loaded gun in the pocket.

Messinger took the stand as the seventh witness of the morning and the Commonwealth's 48th witness of the trial. Every seat in the court was taken. There was a long line again outside.

"He Said He Shot Two," Says Messinger

Mrs. Richard Ely, daughter-in-law of the governor; county officials from Springfield, the three Millen sisters, Norma's father and others were in court.

"Murton told me he had robbed a bank in Needham and got about $12,000," he said. "During the robbery the alarm went off, he said, and a policeman was coming across the street and he shot him.

"When they left the bank they hadn't gone very far when a policeman stepped out to stop them and he shot him and kept going at the rate of about 80 miles an hour."

"Did he say who was with him?" Dist.-Atty. Edmund R. Dewing inquired.

"Yes," said Messinger.

"Who?"

George Stanley Harvey and William R. Scharton leaped up with objections. Judge Brown called counsel to the far corner of the bench and then called Messinger over. The conference was on when recess was declared.

Abe Faber slumped back with his head down and his eyes closed. Except for one brief moment during the morning his position and attitude had remained unchanged.

At School With Murt in Roxbury

Messinger is 26, blocky in build, with fine, regular features and snapping black eyes. His forehead is high, his hair thinning.

His home is in Brooklyn, he said, but he lived in Roxbury and in Winthrop.

"I went to school with Murton."

On Saturday, Feb. 10, eight days after the Needham murder, he said Murton looked him up in New York and that they met at the K. of C. Hotel, talked about a half hour and went to the Hotel Edison. Murton's brother, Harry, and Messinger's fiancee were present, he testified.

"He checked out of the Hotel Edison and went to the Hotel Chesterfield. We stayed there about two hours, had dinner and went to a theater. There was no conversation at that meeting about the Needham crime," Messinger said.

"Did you have a talk with him during which the town of Needham was mentioned?"

"I did," said Messinger, and related it.

Nurse Found Bullet in McLeod's Clothing

Other morning witnesses were Ellen Clark, a Glover Hospital nurse; Chief William H. Sullivan of Norwood police, Edward Walker and Matthew Murphy, janitors of Back Bay apartment houses; Daniel Goldstein, a taxicab driver, and Charles Prescott, employe of the registry of motor vehicles.

Walker is the janitor at 1175 Boylston st., Back Bay, where the government alleged in its opening the Needham crime was plotted. He testified that Murton Millen hired an apartment there on October 20, and that he also saw Irving and Faber there.

On February 13 he visited the apartment with police and found a note on a dresser. The note was marked for identification, but not read.

Walker was asked in cross-examination by Scharton whether he saw any change in Faber now.

"No, except that his moustache seems a bit bigger and he seems thinner," said the witness.

All three prisoners smiled, Faber's smile being proof that while he may not see, he hears what is going on.

Murphy testified that on Feb. 13 he rented an apartment at 117 Audubon rd., to a Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clifton. He identified Murton as "Clifton." "Mrs. Clifton," he said, twice went to his office on Feb. 16 and once made a telephone call.

Janitor Says Murton Identification Right

His cross-examination by Harvey developed a bit of humor. "He was very nice," he said of Murton. When Harvey sought to show newspaper pictures of Murton might be responsible for his identification as Clifton, Murphy said he didn't read any newspaper.

"You couldn't have been mistaken," Harvey asked with a touch of irony.

"Well I suppose I could have been, but I didn't seem to be, did I?" was the janitor's answer.

Goldstein testified to driving two men and a woman from the Audubon rd. apartment to the Back Bay station on February 16.

"I see one," he said when asked if he could identify either of the two men. He picked out Murton.

"I'm sorry you missed your train," he said he told the three when they reached the station. The woman, he said, replied "That's perfectly all right."

Prescott introduced the registry records of the burned car and a smaller car registered to Murton Millen.

Before court opened this morning, Attorney Harvey revealed that he had received a threatening letter that promised harm to the Millen brothers, kidnaping of himself and Murton Millens' wife unless he aided in convicting the accused trio. The letter, mailed in Boston Wednesday and addressing Attorney Harvey as "District Attorney," was set down by officials as the work of a crank.

Faber, who sits minutes on end with his eyes closed and his head rolling, no matter what the testimony, is looking forward to the witness stand.

He will go on, according to his attorney, William R. Scharton.

"Most certainly he will testify," said Scharton, "and I expect he will prove himself guiltless."

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lemoine, a young couple from Woonsocket, R. I., were at the head of the line this morning. They arrived at 6:15 and had their breakfast while waiting—milk and rolls fetched by a messenger boy. Sergt. Walter Readell, the gate guard, declared the crowds were larger than any that sought admittance to the Sacco-Vanzetti trial.

Rev. Norman Brighton, Norma's father, indicated for the first time that she may not be bailed.

"I wonder if it isn't better that she remain where she is for the time being," he said. "Her courage is good and her spirits have improved."

Crowds Throng Approaches to Millen-Faber Trial

With the preliminary stages of Norfolk County's murder trial out of the way, and with the government marshaling the heavy artillery of its evidence against the Millen brothers and Abe Faber, whom it accuses of the Needham Trust Co. outrage, the crowds around the courthouse are growing daily in size. Here is a part of the throng that saw the three defendants leave the building. Even a greater press of people was on hand today in the hope of being able to hear Paul Messinger, alleged go-between for the three, testify for the state. 3 Women Knit During Trial

Dedham Courthouse, April 27—Three women spectators, harking back to the days of the French Revolution, brought their knitting with them to the Millen-Faber trial today and during the morning recess blithely operated their needles.

One woman embroidered. In the 20th century surroundings, the days when royalty lost their heads on the guillotine and the bourgoise sat on the wall and did needlework, were vividly recalled.

Two Found Dead by Gas in Home

The couple had not been seen for the past few days and neighbors called the police. The house was broken into today. Police are inclined to believe the couple were victims of asphyxiation.

CHIPMAN HELD IN $50,000

Max Chipman, alleged Boston kidnaper, pleaded not guilty when arraigned today in Kansas City on a complaint charging him with being a fugitive from justice in Massachusetts.

Bond was fixed at $50,000, which he was unable to furnish.

Boston detectives arrested Chipman in a night club in connection with the abduction, October 11, 1932, of Herman P. Rutstein, who was held for $40,000 ransom.

Chipman said he would fight extradition.

Rutstein was in conference this afternoon with Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle and it is believed that he will go to Kansas City later for the extradition hearing.

Cleared of N. Y. Killing

New Haven, Ct., April 27 (AP)—William Mirman, 29, of New Haven, Ct., was cleared today of any connection with the slaying of a New York detective. Mirman was released after a technical charge of idleness was nol prossed. He had been held in $10,000 since Wednesday.

Mrs. Ely Gets Choice Seat

Lt. Thomas Mitchell of the state police personaly escorted Mrs. Ely and her friends to their places on the front row.

However, Deputy Harold Capen, son of Sheriff Samuel Capen, who is handling the seating arrangement, attempted to remove Mrs. Ely from her place. He told her the seats were reserved for the press.

Lt. Mitchell, however was successful in reseating the governor's daughter-in-law and there she remained for the rest of the day.

'BABY FACE' NELSON, PAL OF DILLINGER, NEAR ARREST

Keys to Los Angeles Jail Are Found on Woman; Killer's Doctor Explains Operation

By Associated Press

Fifield, Wis., April 27—A man believed to be George (Baby Face) Nelson, quick-shooting gunner of the John Dillinger gang, today was believed in near range of a posse that had tracked him in the northern Wisconsin woods.

The man who the authorities think is the machine gunning pal of the elusive Dillinger and who was identified as the gangster who mowed down Federal Agent C. Carter Baum when the Dillinger crew shot their way to freedom last Sunday near Mercer, was believed to be making his last stand against the law.

Once during the hours before dawn the "Baby Face" was reported to have been surrounded by federal agents and deputy sheriffs in the desolate wooded area of this section, but as the hours wore on and no further definite trace of the gangster was found, it was believed that Nelson might have made good his escape, after all.

AUTOMOBILE STOLEN

The trail of the Dillinger marksman, who, momentarily at least, stole the spotlight of notoriety from his chief—who is still being hunted by 5000 or more officers—was first picked up in the village of Lac Du Flambeau, northeast of Fifield, when an automobile was stolen there by a man theauthorities are convinced was Nelson. He apparently had been hiding in the vicinity of the Lac Du Flambeau Indian reservation, having escaped from the Sunday night fighting at Mercer in the car in which Baum rode to his death.

Meanwhile in Los Angeles it was reported that keys to the Hollywood police station had been found in the possession of Evelyn Frechette, alleged aide of John Dillinger.

The Times said keys found in the woman's possession had been tried by Department of Justice agents in the locks of the police station and that they fitted the door to the Detective Bureau and "other strategic places."

DOCTOR IS HELD

The army of officers searching for Dillinger, himself, were told by Dr. Clayton May of Minneapolis, that he was given the choice of treating Dillinger for a gunshot wound or of being "rubbed out" with a machine gun.

As he told the story, Dr. May nervously paced the cell where he is being held to await the action of a federal grand jury on charges that he harbored the fugitive desperado.

The physician said he was enticed from his office on the forenoon of March 31—the day Dillinger was wounded by City Detective Henry Cummings—and was repeatedly threatened with death. He was kept under a close guard by a Dillinger henchman, while his nurse, Mrs. Augusta Salt, also held on a charge of harboring the Indiana killer—was imprisoned in her own home.

Dr. May said he was lured to an alley where Dillinger, wounded, sat in a car, and was then forced to drive the outlaw's car to the home of his nurse, who is the mother of three children.

Dr. May said he was admonished that he would be followed and that if he disobeyed commands, not only would he be killed, but that his nurse also would meet the same fate.

"I was informed the evening of the first day that I was treating John Dillinger," he continued. "For four days and three nights Dillinger, Green, the woman he claimed to be his wife and another woman held my nurse prisoner in her own home. When I went to the office I observed that Green constantly followed me."

BREMER CASH IS RECOVERED

By Associated Press

Chicago, April 27—Arrest of a suspect carrying $3000 of the $200,000 paid for the release of Edward Bremer, St. Paul banker and brewer, from kidnapers several months ago was disclosed here today.

The suspect, William E. Vidler, 34, a reputed ex-convict, was arrested yesterday in a Chicago gambling establishment and has been held incommunicado.

The money found in Vidler's pockets, Melvin H. Purvis, U. S. agent, disclosed, included $2865 in $5 and $10 bills identified as part of the ransom money.

Federal authorities said they hoped Vidler's arrest would help to bring about apprehension of other suspects in the kidnaping and perhaps aid in recovery of additional ransom payment.

ROBLES DRAWS $8000 TO PAY CHILD'S KIDNAPERS

SAFE RETURN OF GIRL, 6, PREDICTED

Rich Grandfather Ignores Police in a New Negotiation

By International News Service

Tucson, Ariz., April 27—The safe return of six-year-old June Robles to the arms of her father and mother seemed very near today when it was learned that Bernade Robles, the child's rich grandfather, withdrew $8000 from a local bank in bills of twenty, ten, and five dollar denominations as was specified by the child's kidnapers in their original note demanding a ransom of $15,000.

Shortly after obtaining the money, the elder Robles and his son, Fernando Robles, father of little June, disappeared from their home in what was believed to be an attempt to contact an intermediary of the kidnapers.

Returning from his mysterious trip, the elder Robles asserted:

"I am confident that I will have June back safely before sunset today. I am ready and anxious to meet the demands of the kidnapers for $10,000 as soon as possible."

Due to threats of violence to the child if his actions were revealed, Robles refused to make any further statements regarding his plans for contacting the abductors, or exactly when he expected the return of the child.

There was no confirmation of rumors that the ransom had already been paid and that the child was being returned secretly to her home.

The Robles family's movements were wrapped in secrecy. They were unaided by local officers, who this morning called off the gigantic man hunt for the girl's kidnapers in an effort to effect the safe return of June.

Upwards of 2000 volunteers, together with sheriff's forces and local officers, who have been combing city, desert and mountains, were held in check while negotiations proceeded.

Who's the Lucky Man?

Inez Norton, once a Follies beauty—and still beautiful, even if she's been a Ziegfeld alumna these many years—and erstwhile sweetheart of murdered Arnold Rothstein, admits that she's going to be married in June. However, she won't say who the lucky man is, other than that he is a lawyer and of a well-known New York family. She's in Los Angeles now. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Man, 60, Denies Guilt, Killed

Huntsville, Tex., April 27 (AP) — A 60-year-old grandfather, Charlie Outlaw, died early today in the electric chair for the hammer slaying of Mrs. Frank McCall, 58, a year ago last January.

Grey-locked and bent, the elderly man walked steadily to the chair. There he turned to the prison warden and said:

"I'm too old a man to die with a lie on my lips, warden—I didn't do it."

Austrians to O. K. New Constitution

Vienna, April 27 (AP)—Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss issued a decree today for the resurrection of Parliament. Only pro-government representatives will be permitted to answer the roll call on Monday and, as soon as they have approved the new Austrian constitution, Parliament officially and permanently will be buried.

Some grumbles are being heard from Agrarian and German members who suggest they should be permitted to see the constitution next, as yet not made public, before approving it.

FUNERAL HELD FOR YOUNGMAN

Funeral services of extreme simplicity, with no honorary bearers or ushers, were held at the Brighton Congregational Church this afternoon for the late William S. Youngman, former state treasurer and lieutenant-governor.

In tribute to Mr. Youngman, offices of the state treasurer were closed from 2:30 to 3:30. Twenty patrolmen and two sergeants, under direction of Capt. John McGrath of Brighton were detailed to handle the crowds at the church.

Uniformed guards of honor and delegations from various veteran organizations to which the former state executive belonged, attended the funeral. Rev. Silas W. Anthony, of the Brighton church, assisted by Rev. Robert W. Coe of Leyden Congregational Church, will officiate.

James Roosevelt Buys Knockabout

James Roosevelt, son of the President, has purchased a small knockabout from the Crosby Yacht Building & Storage Co., Osterville, for use this summer in New England water, it was learned here today.

Its cabin capacity is four persons and it has a galley forward. It is 24 feet on the waterline, 34 feet overall, 10 feet at the beam and draws 1½ feet.

Super Income Tax Rate to Stir Big Storm

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, April 27 — As the House prepared for a battle Monday over the Couzens 10 per cent super income tax, examination of the new 417 million dollars tax bill disclosed that some classes of income taxpayers will pay the highest taxes in the world.

The combined federal and state income taxes on some of the larger incomes exceed even those of Great Britain, which has been the most heavily taxed nation on incomes.

House leaders predicted the Couzens super tax would be rejected, but they were ready to accept other proposals in the bill as revised by the Senate and the Senate-House conference.

MAY RETARD RECOVERY

Stubborn resistance to imposition of 200 million dollars more taxes than originally approved by the Administration was planned by Republican fiscal leaders in the House.

The measure faces attacks on the ground it carries discriminatory rates and taxes business so heavily that recovery may be retarded.

Some congressional students of taxation, held, however, that with continued heavy expenditures by the federal government, income taxes will be boosted, especially on the so-called middle class, in the next few years.

The maximum surtax under the new bill is 59 per cent on incomes of over a million dollars in addition 26 states have individual income tax laws.

TREADWAY PLANS ATTACK

The combined federal and state income tax in Wisconsin on an income of a million dollars would be $641,394 as compared with $638,488 in Great Britain, according to the latest statistics in the hands of congressional tax experts.

The new income tax rates carried in the conference report establish a new peace-time high, and approach the drastic income tax rates of 1918 during the World War.

President Roosevelt, House leaders said, will approve the bill. He had previously threatened a veto, because of the tax against cocoanut oil from the Philippines, but leaders believed that the compromise proposal had met most of the President's objections.

Reps. Bacharach (R.) of New Jersey and Treadway (R.) of Massachusetts, House members of the conference committee who refused to sign th report, planned to attack the entire bill.

PILFERED PANTS OF PORTIA FLY ON FLAGPOLE

Janitor Spies Ward's Garment High Over Cambridge School

The trousers—the mysteriously stolen and long sought trousers—of Hamilton Booth Ward, Shakespearean reader, were discovered today at Rindge Technical High School, Cambridge.

It was Janitor John Campbell who found 'em. He couldn't very well help it. For they were flying gallantly in the morning breeze from the top of a 60-foot flagpole in the school yard.

From the point of view of Rindge Tech authorities, trousers at flagpole top were better than no trousers at all, because Mr. Ward, who lost the trousers while costumed as Portia in a school hall entertainment, has sent a bill for them.

OH, NO JOB AT ALL

And Mr. Ward, not too happy at having been obliged to go home from the school to Lynn garbed airily, but inadequately, in Portia's flowing robes, has been firm in his intention to collect.

It was good news, therefore, to Headmaster John W. Wood, when the rising sun threw light on the trousers' whereabouts today.

All that was necessary, plainly, was to haul 'em down, have 'em pressed, box 'em up, and mail 'em Lynnwards. Then let justice take its course.

But it wasn't so easy.

The culprits, old or young, who had hoisted their loot to its lofty point of vantage, had pulled one halliard to the top of the pole.

"FIREMEN, SAVE 'EM!"

And, with only a single halliard within reach, there was no apparant way to pull the trousers down.

But down they had to come. It was time to raise the school house flag. Old Glory couldn't go up until the pants came down.

"Call the fire department," suggested Janitor Campbell, and negotiations with city officials were immediately opened.

Meantime a crowd of several hundred persons was gathered to offer advice—and jeer. Broadway, Trowbridge st., and Rindge drive were blocked. And Cambridge police became interested, too.

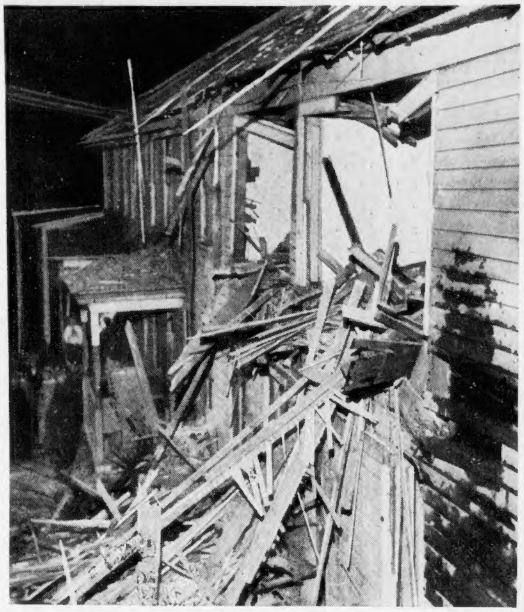
At the same time Michael E. Fitzgerald, superintendent of Cambridge schools, passed the buck to William Fitzgerald, superintendent of school buildings, who promptly sent for a steeplejack.

With firemen, police sleuths, and professional climbers all in the running, it was anybody's guess who would retrieve the trousers. It was also anybody's guess what will happen to the culprits when—and if—they are ever caught.

Minister's Son Killed

Winchester, N. H., April 27—Robert Carl, seven, son of the Rev. George T. Carl, pastor of the Winchester Federated Church, was killed here when pinned against a tree by an auto operated by Granville Jennings, 18.

Where Blast Made Tomb for Woman



A terrific explosion today wrecked four houses, damaged 40 others, killed a woman and injured a score of other persons in Chicopee Falls. This frame house, smashed as if it were a match box, shows force of blast. The woman's body was found in its ruins. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

ONE DEAD, 11 HURT IN BLAST AT CHICOPEE

4 Buildings Razed, 40 Others Damaged in Explosion

Chicopee, April 27—One woman was killed and 11 persons were seriously injured today when an explosion razed four houses in Canterbury ave., in the Chicopee Falls section, and damaged 40 buildings, including a Catholic church.

WINDOWS ARE BROKEN

It was feared that Joseph Prinko, husband of the dead woman, and a lodger, Victor Beaulier, had also been killed, but late this afternoon fire officials announced that a careful search of the ruins had failed to reveal any trace of their bodies. Police expressed the opinion that they were in Vermont.

Windows were broken in all houses and other structures within a radius of a quarter of a mile of the Prinker house. The damage to St. George's Church was estimated at nearly $5000.

Fire and police officials stated that the total property loss would probably be more than $40,000.

The explosion coming at a time when all of the occupants of the buildings were in bed threw the city into a state of excitement.

FIRE FOLLOWS BLAST

The explosion was followed by a fire which for a time threatened to consume the ruins, but quick action by firemen prevented the flames from assuming serious proportions. As soon as the first pieces of fire apparatus arrived, a general alarm was sounded.

Fire officials stated that they were working on the theory that the explosion was due to an accumulation of some form of gas, but other theories were advanced and the cause remained a mystery.

GERMAN DEBTS PARLEY OPENS

By Associated Press

Berlin, April 26—A conference on the proposed transfer of German foreign debts, a favorable outcome of which is held vital for revival of world trade, opened here this afternoon.

Germans at the last minute, it was learned, were warned by Great Britain against moratorium plans for the Dawes and Young loans.

Dr. Jhalmar Schact, president of the Reichsbank, is seeking to convince creditors that suspension of interest payments is necessary because gold coverage has reached a low level and to offer scrip payment as an alternative.

MESSINGER CALLS MURTON 'KILLER'

WITNESS LAYS 2 KILLINGS TO OLD FRIEND

By JAMES J. SMITH
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Dedham Courthouse, April 27—Old schoolmates leered at each other from opposite sides of the court today when Saul Messinger, state's "ace" witness, pointed the accusing finger at Murton Millen.

Messinger's appearance was the highlight of a day replete with thrilling cross-examination and even smatterings of mirth in drab surroundings.

Nurse Helen Clark Tells About Bullets

Court opened at 10:29. Miss Helen Clark of 178 Chestnut st., Needham, a pretty young nurse at the Glover Hospital, was the first witness. She testified she was on duty at the hospital on Feb. 2, when Officer McLeod was brought in.

Q. (by Dewing)—What did you do? A.—I started to undress him.

Q.—Did something occur while you were undressing him? A.—Yes, when I pulled off his coat a bullet fell to the floor.

Q—What did you do with it? A—I placed it in an envelope and put it in my uniform pocket.

Chief Sullivan Tells of Finding Shell

Chief of Police William H. Sullivan of Norwood was the next witness. He testified he went to Lily Pond rd., on February 7, with several of his officers. He identified pictures of the partly burned automobile found there.

Q—Did you order your officers to make an examination of the spot? A—Yes.

Q—Was Officer Conroy there? A—Yes.

Q—Did he give you something? A—Yes, a .22 calibre long shell.

Q—I show you an exhibit and ask you whether or not Officer Conroy handed you that shell? A—He did. (Witness first examined the shell).

Q—And what did you do with it? A—I turned it over to Capt. Van Amburgh.

Q—Was there a man named Snyder also there? A—He was.

Q—And did he hand you something? A—Yes.

Q—What was it? A—A .45-calibre empty shell. (Witness identified the shell as the one Snyder gave him).

Q—What did you do with it? A—I turned it over to Capt. Van Amburgh. (Defense attorneys did not question the police chief.

Janitor Walker Rents Apartment to Millens

Edward Walker, who identified himself as the janitor of the apartment house at 1175 Boylston st., Boston, then took the stand.

Q—Last October did a party named Mr. and Mrs. Millen engage an apartment at 1175 Boylston st.? A—Yes.

Q—When? A—On October 20. It was taken by Mrs. Millen. She wasn't married then.

Q.—Did you see Irving Millen there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Anybody else? A.—Mr. Faber.

Q.—Do you see Murton Millen in the courtroom now? A.—Yes, he is sitting in the middle.

Q.—Do you see Irving Millen? A—Yes, on the left.

Q.—And do you see Faber? A.—Yes, on the other side.

FOUND NOTE IN ROOMS

Q—When did you go into the apartment the week of Feb. 11? A—I believe it was on the 13th.

Q—Did you go into the partment with some people? A—Yes, with officers of Station 16.

Q—Did you find anything on the dresser? A—Yes, I found a note.

Dewing showed the witness a white card, and the janitor said it was the note.

Atty. Harvey looked the card over. So did Atty. Scharton. The card was finally marked for identification.

Q—What was the condition of the apartment when you entered it that Tuesday, Feb. 13th? A—It looked as though the people had just moved out.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

Atty. Scharton then cross-examined the witness.

Q—When did you last see Mr. Faber? A—I couldn't give you the exact date.

Q—Now, please, Mr. Witness, that is a simple question. I ask you when did you last see Mr. Faber? A—I couldn't say.

Q.—Well, have you noted any change in the man that you see now and the man you saw then? A.—Nothing in particular. Only his moustache is a little larger than it was then.

A titter among the spectators was quickly suppressed.

Q.—Is he any thinner? A.—No.

Q.—Is he any paler? A.—No.

Q.—When did you know him by the name of Faber? A.—I saw it in the newspapers.

Q.—Oh, I see, and so you put two and two together and made it four? A.—Yes, sir.

Redirect by District Attorney Dewing.

Q.—But you recognize Faber in the courtroom as the man you saw in the apartment? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—But it was because you put two and two together and made it four after you read the newspapers, wasn't it? A.—Yes, sir.

Matthew Murphy Tells of Norma Visit

Matthew Murphy, superintendent of the apartment building at 117 Audubon rd., now called Park drive, followed Walker to the stand. Baldheaded and wearing glasses, he injected the first bit of humor into the morning's testimony.

Q—About Feb. 13 did you show Suite 11 to some people? A—They hired it on that date.

Q—What name did they give you? A—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clifton.

Q—Do you see the man who gave you the name of Harry Clifton in the courtroom now? A—Yes, the man in the middle.

The prosecutor, for the purpose of the record, drew an agreement from counsel that the witness meant Murton Millen.

Q—And he gave you the name of Harry Clifton? A—Yes.

Q—Did something happen on February 16th? A—Mrs. Clifton came into my office about 4 or 4:30 in the afternoon.

Q—And did you have some talk with her? A—Yes.

Q—Did she return again? A—In a few minutes. She had a kind of hurried appearance.

Q—Did she do something? A—she used the telephone.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

Atty. Harvey then took the witness on cross-examination.

Q.—As I understand it, Mr. Murphy, the apartment was hired Sept. 1? A.—No, on Feb. 13.

Q.—How long did they remain there? A.—Until Feb. 16th.

Q.—Nothing unusual in a man coming to hire an apartment is there? A.—No, sir, he was very nice. (Witness smiled.)

Q.—How often did you see him? A.—Twice.

Q—But you saw his picture in the paper? A—Yes, the evening of February 16.

Q—You saw his pictures many times in the paper? A—Yes, sir, but I don't read the papers much.

Q—So you don't say you haven't read anything about this case? A—Oh, I look at the papers every day but I don't read them.

Q.—You saw the man you identify as Murton Millen only twice while he was at the apartment? A.—Yes, when he first came and on the evening of Feb. 13.

Q.—There may be a mistake in your identification of him now? A.—Oh, possibly, but I don't seem to be. (Laughter.)

Goldstein Tells of Driving the Millens

Daniel Goldstein, taxicab driver, was called. He testified he was at a stand near the Hotel Buckminister when he received a telephone call to pick up a fare at apartment 11, 117 Audubon rd., and drove there about 4:35. He identified a waybill on which he entered the call.

MURT AND MESSINGER IN DRAMATIC CLASH

MURT RENTED BOYLSTON ST. APARTMENT

He said he rang the bell of the apartment and saw two men and a woman walking down the stairs carrying bags. He carried two bags to the cab, he said.

Q. Was there any conversation? A. Yes, I asked them where they were going and one of the men answered Back Bay station.

Q. Which one told you that? A. The taller of the two men.

Q—Do you see him here? A—Yes, the one sitting in the center of the cage. (The witness pointed to Murton.)

Q—When you arrived at the station was there any conversation? A—Yes, I said I was sorry they missed their train, one of the men said "it's perfectly all right."

There was lull in the questioning. Irving stretched his free arm and yawned. Murton watched the witness and Faber nodded, eyes shut. One of the Millens' sisters walked to Atty. Harvey's table and spoke briefly to him.

CROSS EXAMINATION

Cross-examined by Harvey, the witness said there was nothing unusual about the ride to the station, but that within the hour he received orders from his office to report to Boston police headquarters. He examined only one picture of Murton Millen, but saw many others in the newspapers, he said.

Q—Is there any difference in his appearance now and when you saw him February 16? A—I can't see any difference except in clothing.

Q—Did he wear a hat that day? A—No.

Q—Did the other man wear a hat that day? A—No.

Charles Prescott of Wakefield, an employe of the Registry of Motor Vehicles, next state witness produced the records of registration of the Packard sedan owned by Mrs. Clara T. Hartigan and the registration records of a 1933 Chevrolet sedan owned by Murton Millen, 1175 Boylston st., Boston. Records on both cars were marked as exhibits despite the objection of Harvey on the Millen record.

Saul Messinger, State's Ace Witness, on Stand

Saul Messinger, schoolboy companion of Murton Milen, was called as a witness at 11:15 a. m. by the district attorney. He walked to the witness stand without looking to the right or left and stopped before the clerk's desk to take the oath.

Q—How long have you lived in New York A—About three years.

Q—Where did you live before that? A—I lived in Somerville, for about a quarter of a year.

Q—Where did you live before that? A—In Winthrop, for about two years.

Q—Where did you live before that? A—In Roxbury.

Q—When you lived in Roxbury, did you know Murton and Irving Millen? —A Yes.

Q—State whether or not you went to school with them? A—I went to school with Murton.

Q—Some time in February did you see Murton in New York? A—Yes.

Q—When? A—I saw him Saturday evening, February 10.

Q—Did you look him up or did he look you up? A—He looked me up.

Q—How do you know that? A—He called my home on February 9.

Q—As a result of that call did you meet him some place? A—Yes.

Q—Where? A—At the K. of C. Hotel.

Q—How long did you talk with him on February 10? A—About half an hour.

Q—Then where did you go? A—To the Hotel Edison.

Q—Which one? A—Harry.

Q—Who was with you? A—My fiancee.

Q—Where did you go then? A—He checked out of the Hotel Edison and went tothe Hotel Chesterfield. We stayed there about two hours, had dinner and went to a theaer.

Q—Then where did you go after the theater? A—To my fiancee's home in Brooklyn.

Q—During that time did he have any conversation with you regarding what happened in Needham on February 2? A—No.

Q—When did you next see him? A—The following morning, at the Hotel Chesterfield.

"He Said He Shot Two," Testifies Saul

Q.—Why did you go to the hotel? A—I went back to get my fiancee's galoshes which she left there the night before.

Q.—Did you have a talk with him during which the town of Needham was mentioned. A.—After I had been sitting there for a while Murton told me he had robbed a bank in Needham and got about $12,000. During the robbery the alarm went off. A policeman was crossing the street and he shot him. When they left the bank they hadn't gone very far when a policeman stepped out to stop them and he shot him and kept going at the rate of about 80 miles per hour.

Q—Did he say who was with him? A—Yes.

Q—Who did he say was with him?

Attorney Scharton called counsel and the district attorney to the side of the bench farthest from the witness stand for a conference.

During the conference, Saul stood with his hands clasped behind his back and his eyes avoided the prisoners in the cage. The Millens eyed him closely, grimaced and nodded their heads. Faber kept his eyes on the floor.

Messinger gladly accepted the invitation of a deputy sheriff to step from the witness stand and take a seat. He was hardly seated when he was called int othe bench conference.

While the conference was in progress, Judge Brown declared a recess at 11:35.

Messinger's testimony was abrupt ly suspended at the conclusion of recess and he was returned to Dedham Jail. The move was a complete surprise.

Detective O'Brien Tells of Messinger Talk

Q—Have you met Saul Messinger? A—Yes, on Feb. 24, at his room when I talked with him.

Q—And did you go with somebody else and him tothe Hotel Lincoln on Feb. 25? A—Yes.

Q—What made you go there? A—On the receipt of a telegram intercepted to him. (Atty. Harvey objected but the court ordered that the answer could stand).

Q—Whom was the telegram addressed to? A—To Saul Messinger.

Q—What was the name of the sending place? A—Baltimore, Md.

Q—Who went with you to the Hotel Lincoln? A—Lieut John Stokes of the Massachusetts state police, Lieut. Easton of the New York police, Detective John Fitzsimmons of the New York police, Saul Messinger, Mr. Hall and Mr. Smith, of hte Burns Detective Agency.

Q—What did you do when you arrived. A—Stood in the lobby and loked around, saw no one we were looking for. We had a room in the hotel so went to that room and stayed here until 2 p. m., when we returned to the lobby and we saw the person we were looking for.

Q—Who was in your company when you returned? A—Lieut. Stokes.

Q—Did you see someone in the lobby that attracted your attention? A—Yes. He was sitting in a chair in the hotel lobby.

Q—Did Lieut. Stokes leave you. A—He did. I went over to the cigar stand and Lieut. Stokes went to the Eighth ave. entrance of the hotel.

"Messinger Shook Hand of the Man in Lobby"

Q—Where was Lieut. Stokes all this time? A—He was in the lobby of the hotel all the time.

Q—Did he make a statement to you as he passed you? A—Yes. He went back to the room and when he came back Mr. Hall and Mr. Smith, Detective Fitzsimmons, Saul Messinger and Lieut. Easton were with him.

Q—Did you have your eye on the person all the time. A—Yes.

Q—When you saw saul again what did you observe him do. A—I saw him walk across the lobby, he came down the stairway and approached a man I saw sitting in the chair. He went over to him to shake hands and as he did I and Mr. Stokes went toward this man in the chair.

Q—What did Lieut. Stokes do? A—Lieut. Stokes took his arm and put it around the shoulder of this person, at the same time, holding his right arm.

Q—Who did that? A—Mr. Hall.

Q—What did the take out? A—He took out a .32 calibre revolver.

Q—State whether or not it was loaded? A—It was.

Q—Have you the bullets? A—Yes.

"What Did You Do With Irving Then?"

Q—From statements this man made to you and property you found on him, whom did you find this man to be?

Attorney Harvey objected. The answer was stricken out. District Attorney Dewing then offered the revolver and five bullets and asked that they be marked. Attorney Harvey, examining the revolver, tore a little ticket off the handle and then looked up into the district attorney's face. The prosecutor took the ticket and the gun back, but said nothing.

As Dewing approached the jury to show the revolver, Murton made a tight-lipped remark to his brother and shook his head from side to side. Irving Stared open-mouthed at Detective O'Brien.

Q—By Dewing—What did you do with Irving after you took the gun from his pocket? A—We took him to Room 859 where I searched him.

Q—What did you find? A—In the inside pocket of his jacket I found an envelope containing $289. The envelope bore the mark Harrington Hotel, Wasington, D. C.

The court admitted the money and ruled that it be placed in a new envelope after objection by Harvey. The original envelope bore notations by Detective O'Brien.

ALE BREWING SCENE IN THE 17TH CENTURY

Ale and ale brewing live in song and story. The fame of an especially fine ale spread from town to town and shire to shire. Quality was jealously maintained.

It is fitting that Croft Ale should be brewed in New England.

For New Englanders know ale and love it. They demand a hearty drink—a drink such as they knew and enjoyed in years gone by. They have back of them the traditions of the finest ale brewed in this country before the days of prohibition.

That is why Croft Ale, brewed by the best of time-tested methods, with all the robust strength and mellowness of the good old ales of our forefathers, is New England's most popular ale—New England's Own.

Try a glass of Croft Ale. Notice the difference yourself. You'll like its tang—its full-bodied heartiness. Like the finest of old time ale, Croft is a wholesome food with a definite health value, as well as a delicious drink. It makes the simplest meal more enjoyable.

of the bills entered as exhibits and also the initials of Lieut. Easom.

When Dewing showed the bills to the jury he called attention to the mark "B Nelson," which the government contends was an alias used by Irving.

Q—Did you compare the serial numbers of these bills with something else? A—Yes, with a list of numbers in the possession of Lieut. Stokes.

Check for Machine Gun Put in Evidence

Dewing walked over to Lieut. Stokes who sat at the prosecutor's table and took from him a check. It was the check which the government contends was taken from the Washington terminal checkroom in receipt of the machine gun used in the Needham killing.

It was admitted as an exhibit over Harvey's objection as was the wallet and $89. Dewing called the jury's attention to a large $2 bill.

He also requested the jury to note the time marked on the terminal check "Feb. 24, 3:33 p. m. Washington Terminal Parcel Room, Washington, D. C."

SMILES REIGN IN FIN. COM.

Once again, Chairman Joseph J. Leonard of the Finance Commission and Frank A. Goodwin, predecessor who has not yet accepted his ousting, met today in the commission offices, but as yesterday the meeting was friendly.

Goodwin was leaving as Leonard entered. The two men smiled and shook hands, just as they did yesterday, passed a remark solicitous of each other's well-being, and then Goodwin departed.

"Things are going along in normal course here," the new chairman said as he seated himself at the chairman's desk. "I am acquainting myself with the duties of the office and I am to meet with my associates at 3:45 p. m.

"At present, I will go into a lot of correspondence. I am not having any difficulty with Mr. Goodwin."

MILLEN FAMILY TAKES ACTIVE PART IN TRIAL

By WILLIAM C. CONWAY
Boston Evening American Correspondent

Dedham Courthouse, April 27—Women were again in the majority in the spectators' line today. Many of those who sought admission were young and pretty girls. The record for early arrivals, however, is held by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lemoine of Woonsocket, R. I., who arrived today at 6:15 a. m.

The invited guests included Mrs. Charles E. Houghton, of Norwood, wife of Judge Charles E. Houghton, of the Norfolk County Land Court. Mrs. George K. Bird, of Norwood, was also a guest during both sessions.

Deputy Supt. John M. Anderson, of the Boston Police Department, has spent three days in the courtroom waiting to testify. He has been accompanied by his aid, Special Officer James Welch.

Joseph Millen, father of the Millen brothers, still continues to take an active part in his sons' defence. He and his three daughters sat in the front row of spectators' benches facing the witness stand. Twice during the cross-examination of Frank Le Vierge, battery repair man, Atty. Harvey walked back to confer with the family before asking a question.

Immediately after they had been identified by Chief Bliss, of the Needham police department, the uniform overcoat and under garments worn by the slain police officers were thrown on the floor near the clerk's desk. The blodstained overcoat of Forbes A. McLeod is perforated with three bullet holes.

Whist Party for St. Williams Band

A bridge and whist party for the benefit of the St. Williams school band, winner of the Boston Evening American's band contest last September, will be held at St. Williams School Hall, Savin Hill, Dorchester, Monday evening.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the affair consists of Helen Lafferty, Edmund J. Gully and Robert F. Riley.

SALTONSTALL CLEARS FIELD FOR BACON

If it were not for the Goodwin and Fuller storm clouds on the horizon, Lieut.-Gov. Gaspar G Bacon would have clear sailing for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, it was generally conceded on Beacon Hill today.

Bacon's chances were brightened by the decision of Speaker Leverett Saltonstall to remain in the House until "another day," seeking re-election to his present post.

This was taken to mean that the pre-primary nomination would go to Bacon by acclamation.

But when former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller heard about it, he merely said:

"That doesn't mean a thing in my young life. I am still reserving my rights and will decide later just what I propose to do. I don't think the pre-primary convention endorsement will amount to anything."

Frank A. Goodwin, who has just been demoted from the chairmanship of the Boston Fin Com, had no comment to make on the Saltonstall decision.

Saltonstall not only declared for Lieut.-Gov. Bacon, but said that he would support John W. Haigis, of Greenfield for the secondary state post which Bacon relinquishes.

"Battle-Green of Lexington."

In terms, which recalled the grave speech of Colonial days, it protested against federal interference in business under the guise of promoting social reform and economic recovery. It assailed the indefinite extension of legislation originally designed solely for emergency purposes.

"We are resolved," it concluded, "that the individual's rights of private enterprise must continue free from unreasonable interference by the federal government, and we demand their preservation at your hands."

* * *

IT was a fine action by the men of Lexington,—altogether in keeping with the memory of their forbears and the traditions of the past.

In days to come it will be recognized as having been a factor in our emergence from the sad period of confusion and incapacity through which we are passing,—a contribution to our recovery from the medley parlor tricks, infantile thinking and reckless improvisation which passes at the moment in Washington for "governmental policy."

The Lexington protest may not have been "a shot heard round the world,"—but perhaps it was something more—a message that stirred the heart and quickened the thought of every patriotic American in the land.

MARSH AWARD IS GIVEN ARTIST

Richard Mitton, president of Jordan Marsh Co., awarded the gold medal and cash prize of $250 to Harold Brett of North Chatham, the artist whose "Cape Cod Clam Digger" received the greatest number of popular votes in the Fifth Annual Exhibition of Paintings during April 8 through 21 in the Jordan Marsh Co. art galleries.

The presentation was made yesterday afternoon in Mitton's office. Brett has achieved wide fame as an illustrator and portrait painter. His "Cape Cod Clam Digger" won from a field of 142 paintings by contemporary artists of New England.

Second place went to "When the Sun Rides Low," by Robert Strong Woodward; third place, "Table Talk," by Marguerite S. Pearson; fourth place, "Racing Home From China," by Frank Vining Smith; fifth place, "Capt. McKenna of the Fusiliers," by Bernard M. Keyes; sixth place, "Firelight," by Marion Boyd Allen; seventh place, "Evening Calm," by John P. Benson; eighth place, "In the Sail-Loft," by R. H. Ives Gammel; ninth place, "Portrait—Dr. Delbert M. Staley," by Joseph Tepper; 10th place, "The Young Painter," by Earnest Lee Major; 11th place, "Prometheus," by Arthur Spear; 12th place, "Grandmother's Gown," by Philip Trueman Hicks.

Cape Cod Clam Digger Earns $250

Bigger money than any Cape Cod "cahway" digger ever earned in a day or a week is $250, but this one happens to be an oil painting by Harold Brett, of North Chatham. His "Cape Cod Clam Digger" was awarded the first prize of $250 in fifth annual exhibition of paintings in the Jordan Marsh Co. galleries. Richard Mitton, president of the firm, is handing the artist the prize check. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

COURT ORDERS STOCK LOSSES REPAID

stock. It kept an option to buy 25,000 shares of preferred stock at $25 per share.

Also, it sponsored an insurance protective trust, which organized and promoted insurance companies among the fraternal societies.

Piper came down from the Connecticut Valley to the "big town," went to work as a salesman for Childs, Jeffries and at once proved himself to be a go-getter. He earned $19,000 in commissions in 1929, his first year, and the firm liked him.

It liked him so much that it offered to take him in. He was allowed to buy stock in the firm and he went to the State Street Trust Co. and borrowed $18,000 with which to do so. He was told, he said, he could take the stock "at a little less than its liquidating value." That price was placed at $551 per share.

Judge Burns suspects that a "wash sale" was made of the stock; that a single share was sold to fix it at that high value. In any event, he holds that the liquidating price is the actual, fair value, at which the stock would sell at normal conditions.

Business did not get too hot with Childs, Jeffries. The insurance trust turned out to be a flop, he holds. Customers were turning back the stock they declined to accept. Moreover, he holds that the option to buy 25,000 shares preferred of chain stores was not an asset of the firm because the firm never exercised the option.

Judge Burns holds in his decision that the firm was in depressed financial condition, and that it allowed Piper to buy the stock because it was in need of new money. He holds that the actual liquidating value of the stock was closer to $175 per share than the $551 per share for which it was sold to Piper. He holds that Childs and Jeffries, the owners of the firm, knew of the firm's actual condition and that they misrepresented its true value to Piper in this negotiation.

Accordingly, Judge Burns ruled that Piper was entitled to recover the sum of $12,000, which was the difference between what he paid for the stock and its actual, liquidating value. He added $6000 more, as a sum in interest due to Piper for his loss of the principal during the period.

Judge Burns said to the Boston Evening American today that his decision was predicated upon the old common laws of fraud and deceit. He sees little need for the many drastic provisions of the national securities act now under consideration at Washington. The sale and purchase of stock are a contract between seller and buyer, he said, and subject to the same rules of honesty, integrity and decency that apply to all business transactions and to the same basic laws that apply to all these transactions.

The defendant members of the firm asserted they were not knowingly or wilfully guilty of deception. They stated that any figure they named as the true value of the stock at the time of the sale was its fair value at that period.

MILK PROBE IS GIVEN O. K.

By Associated Press

Washington, April 27—The Kopplemann resolution, authorizing the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the sale and distribution of milk and other dairy products, was approved today by the House Interstate Commerce committee.

The commission would be directed to inquire into co-operatives, corporations and others handling milk to determine whether prices are unreasonably high and whether conditions are such as to create a monopoly in the sale and distribution.

Introduced by Rep. Kopplemann (D., Ct.), the measure is based on an audit made by the Farm Adjustment Administration showing that distributors in four of the largest milksheads made a net profit in five years of more than 25 per cent.

1200 VETS HERE BACK ON ROLLS

More than 1200 veterans, dropped from the Veterans' Bureau payroll here under the Roosevelt economy program, will find themselves back on the rolls next Tuesday, under the provisions of the Independent offices bill, which was passed over the President's veto.

Included in the list are 19 blind veterans, 12 of them residents of Boston. They will receive $150 monthly, with $50 additional for the services of an attendant.

Others to be restored to the payrolls include the mental and tubercular classes, whose disability is presumed to have been connected with their service during the World War.

C. F. Nesbit Dead

Washington, April 27—Charles Francis Nesbit, 66, credited with being the man who conceived the idea of having insurance carried on the lives of the United States soldiers and sailors in the World War, is dead.

PLEAS SWAMP M'LEOD FOR BANK BILL

By International News Service

Washington, April 27 (INS)—Petitions and letters in behalf of the McLeod Bill to "thaw" out deposits in closed banks throughout the country mounted beyond the half million mark today.

As the campaign for the measure continued the office of Rep. McLeod (R.) of Michigan was swamped under a load of mail.

"We have more than 500,000 petitions and letters in behalf of the bill, which would make available $1,800,000,000 to depositors who lost their money through the action of government officials," said McLeod.

"I doubt whether such a demand for a measure pending in Congress has been exceeded in the recent history of Congress."

The petitions included thousands of signers in Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and other cities, together with resolutions of public bodies in many parts of the country.

More than 1500 pieces of mail in behalf of the bill were delivered to the White House in one day, sponsors of the legislation were informed.

Despite the pressure for the measure, administration leaders of the House continued to oppose the effort to obtain 145 signers to a petition to make possible a vote on May 14.

O'BRIEN FLAYS TARIFF MAKING

By International News Service

Washington, April 27—Under existing law, the U. S. Tariff Commission is virtually a rubber stamp for the White House, Robert L. O'Brien, chairman of the commission, told the Senate finance committee today in urging enactment of the administration bill to allow the executive to negotiate reciprocal tariff agreements.

"All tariff making is presidential," O'Brien said. "Of course, the Tariff Commission makes reports but the reports are not courageous."

Describing the power of presidents over their tariff commissions, O'Brien said:

"Every president has his views, his theories and beliefs; often he receives the reports of the commission and sends them back for reconsideration.

"The president appoints the commission. For instance, during this administration President Roosevelt will fill five of the six places on the commission."

Commission members are "bound to be influenced" by the appointive power of the President, O'Brien said and calling the present tariff a "flexible tariff" is a "joke."

LIQUOR SALOON WINS IN R. I.

Providence, April 27—All through the night—until 6 a. m. today—the Rhode Island General Assembly battled before terminating its 1934 session by voting for sale of hard liquor in restaurants and saloons and a referendum on pari-mutuel horse and dog betting.

Governor Theodore F. Green signed the pari-mutuel bill at 2 a. m. It will not become law unless it wins public approval in a general referendum to be held next month.

A stubborn fight was made to send the hard liquor bill to referendum also, but this move was defeated through a tie vote, 18 to 18. Doubt was expressed as to whether Gov. Green would sign the measure. The only places where hard liquor can legally be sold now are hotels.

Uncle Sam, who still has his fingers well burned from pulling chestnuts out of the fire between 1914 and 1918, will, if wise, let the Europeans do their own chestnut-pulling this time.

The learned, dignified Chi Tsai-Hu, China's minister to Switzerland, tells the League of Nations:

"Japan, pretending to speak in the name of peace in the Far East, which she alone has disturbed for the past 30 years, is pursuing a policy which is the negation of peace and collaboration."

The learned Chinese should remember that Japan has adopted western ways. That of which he complains is one of those western ways.

Dust storms in the Middle West threaten the wheat crop and may account for last Wednesday's sudden rise in the price of wheat. Such storms might be minimized by methods of cultivation that would protect wheat field surfaces from action of the wind.

The "duck-foot cultivation," developed in the Northwest with funds provided by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., cultivates a strip 70 feet wide, the cultivator blades passing just below the surface, cutting the roots of last year's dry grain without disturbing the stalks, leaving the surface with straw standing to protect it from wind and the wash of rain.

Young ladies that read about sheiks and cave-men, and think they might prefer one to their "Tuxedo-adorned" young American, should read about Zoltan Viniss of Budapest, genuine cave type, now in jail, to stay a month, for kissing a young lady so hard that he broke her jaw in three places. That is news, by the way; you have not read it before.

South America saw one able American woman climb "inaccessible" peaks that no man had ever climbed, and named at least one of the highest in her honor. Now they have seen Miss Laura Ingalls finish a 16,000-mile flight all alone, around South America, over 22 separate countries and the Andes mountains. That should be good advertising for "The States."

British Labor Sees Mosley Failure

Editor's Note—"Mosley isn't the man to put Fascism across in Great Britain," Herbert Morrison, boss of the labor party, and Mosley's strongest opponent, tells H. R. Knickerbocker in the fifth article of the series on the British blackshirts. While admitting that it is hazardous to make cocksure predictions regarding Fascism in light of what happened in Germany, Morrison tells Knickerbocker he is sure that Fascism will not gain control. He believes another party will step into power. And Morrison, writes Knickerbocker, is likely to be the next labor Prime Minister.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, April 27 (INS)—"It is risky to make cocksure predictions about Fascism after the example of what happened in Germany," declares the number one Labor party enemy of Sir Oswald Mosley, number one British Fascist.

The number one labor party enemy of Fascism is Herbert Morrison. Morrison is the boss of London's labor party. He is the man who for the first time in history won control of the London county council for labor. As its boss he has the welfare of 4,300,000 Londoners in his hands, has 72,000 employes, spends $200,000,000 a year and controls a territory larger than Denmark or Switzerland.

His probity, energy and brains have put him in front of the field to become the next labor prime minister. He and his party have most to lose if Fascism were to come in Britain. He is the one man in the labor party who is credited by friend and foe with the courage to put over a real socialist program if labor were to win a majority in the next parliamentary elections.

FEAR EACH OTHER

The Fascists would crush him if they came to power. He would crush them if he came to power.

Many people in Britain are cocksure about Fascism in Britain. They call it out of the question.

"I don't think Mosley is the man to put over Fascism in Britain. Mosley hasn't the staying power. He has been in too many movements, taking up first one thing and then another and tiring of them and dropping them. He would make a better film star than a politician.

"Then, too, I don't think the British are the proper customers for black shirts and stiff arm salutes and all that sort of thing. We have no appetite for that. I know that Mosley is a great speaker. I know he is being supported by Lord Rothermere, but in this country that can be a political drawback.

"I admit Mosley can get a meeting but don't forget that at those meetings of his a great many people come out of sheer curiosity. He is good at advertising.

DOUBTS FORCES

"I don't think Fascism is coming in this country for the following reason; wherever Fascism has yet come on the continent it has come in the main associated with the real or fancied menace of Comunism.

"Finally, to have Fascism, you've got to have the collapse of government. If the present inclination towards economic recovery should stop and the country should sink back into an economic crisis even worse than we have had, and that coincided with a weak and brainless leadership on the part of the Labor party that could make the danger very real. But I don't agree for a moment with Mosley when he says that the parliamentary system in this country has already failed."

"But, Mr. Morrison," I advanced "the argument of the Fascists now is that the left wing of the Labor party is the menace that will bring about Fascism, in other words that you will play the role of the Communists in this respect."

"That is not true," said Mr. Morrison. "It might very well be true if we went about our business in such a way as to alarm the country. If we set out to make a panic, we can make one. If we set out to scare the country into fascism, I suppose we could do it."

CASTING PRIZES ANNOUNCED

The Boston Evening American announces today winners of the Casting Contest, sponsored by this newspaper and the Loew Theaters, with 30 awards being made and with the women in the majority among the successful contestants.

To Alice M. Daniels of 4 South Maple ave., Bradford, goes the first prize of $10 for her selection of Joan Crawford as the star she would cast opposite Clark Gable.

Second and third prizes of $5 each are awarded to Margaret Kervina of 348 Malden st., Revere, and Margaret Hamilton of 100 Heath st., Roxbury, with the fourth and fifth prizes of $2.50 each going to Edward P. O'Donnell of 35 Hudson st., Woburn, and Mrs. Mary Trasente of 59 Warren st., Watertown.

The contest question presented was "What Star Would You Cast Opposite Clark Gable?" One of the most popular choices was Myrna Loy, who is co-starring with Gable in his latest picture, "Men in White," which opens today at Loew's Orpheum.

In addition to the cash prizes, the following will be mailed two tickets to Loew's State Theater, where the all-new talking version of the popular Warwick Deeping novel, "Sorrell and Son," is showing, with H. B. Warner in the starring role.

Pauline Davidson, 218 Central st., Saugus; Katherine Kelly, 21 Dodge st., Gloucester; Marion Egan, 69 Suly ave., Lowell; Ernest Abulale, 35 Heron st., West Roxbury; William O'Brien, 18 Trescott st., Dorchester; L. MME. KURENKO SINGS WITH SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

The third program of the Tchaikovsky Festival at Symphony Hall given yesterday before a large and most cordial audience was devoted to chamber music [illegible] a group of songs from Mme. Kurenko, Russian coloratura soprano.

Mme. Kurenko, who has sung only twice [illegible] in Boston so far as I recall, and who was none too fortunate on those two occasions, sang beautifully yesterday. In the seven songs of Tchaikovsky, admirably selected and requiring a wide range of style and temperament, her voice never lost its beautiful [illegible] quality. The enunciation of the [illegible] text was so clear that a person [illegible] unfamiliar with the [illegible] could distinguish each [illegible]. In addition to the [illegible] Mme. Kurenko [illegible] technique and [illegible] with such [illegible] take a [illegible] been transported [illegible] picture was set in a beautiful frame by the sensitive [illegible] accompaniments of [illegible].

The rest of the program consisted of the string quartet in D major (with the famous Andante Cantabile) and the trio for violin, 'cello, and piano, [illegible] with greater [illegible].

But the performance suffered first from the fact that Symphony Hall is too large for such music and secondly because the musicians who presented the music were from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, too tired after a long arduous season and in the midst of a hard week to play chamber music sensitively. Taking these things into consideration, the Messrs. [illegible] Gundersen, Lefranc and Bedetti presented a workmanlike version of the quartet. And the expansive and elaborate trio, played by Burgin, Bedetti, and Sanroma, received a performance featured by the stylistic art of Burgin and the facile pianism of Sanroma.

Youth Offers Himself as Slave

Up in Goffstown, N. H., there's a mortgage due on his mother's home, he is not working and neither is his brother—and so today Henry Roy, 22, of Washington st., Roslindale, offered to sell himself as a slave.

Roy will become a slave and do any type of work for a price of $2000, $5000 or $10,000, whatever he can get, to turn over to his mother.

Upon Henry Roy and another [illegible] Roy, [illegible] the mother has been depending for support since the death of her husband seven years ago. Now both sons are without employment and if the mortgage is not met next month the Goffstown home will go.

The Roys were comfortable, with [illegible] in New Hampshire [illegible] and a farm. Roy and [illegible] father [illegible] drawn [illegible].

In an attempt to better things [illegible] the Goffstown house [illegible] for both of them.

HOME REPAIRS BILL SPEEDED

By Associated Press

Washington, April 27—American homes need plenty of fixing up and the administration intends to do something about it quickly.

Capitol Hill received word today an administration bill will be sent up in a day or so. Presumably it will call for a government corporation to guarantee mortgages when private lending agencies advance funds for home renovation.

MAGICAL SKILL HALTS WORK OF SPY

This is the second in a series of articles to depict the experiences of Thurston, The Magician. They are written exclusively for the Boston Evening American Secret Agent X-9 members by Thurston himself, while he is appearing at the Metropolitan Theater.

By THURSTON, the MAGICIAN

One adventure in particular, with the United States Secret Service, was valuable enough, in its service to this country, to qualify me for membership in The Boston American's Secret Agent X-9 Club.

The time was back in 1917, just after the United States had entered the World War. Federal agents came to my home early one [illegible] evening and pleaded with me, in the name of patriotism, to [illegible], with rabbits, cards and other paraphernalia requisite to put on an impromptu entertainment at a party then in progress at the Hotel Astor, in New York.

ACE OF PICKPOCKETS

Of course, I readily complied and I was soon riding down the Hudson river boulevard in a big sedan toward the hotel. En route, Uncle Sam's men revealed that there was a certain guest at the party who was suspected of having in his inner coat pocket certain papers that must be recovered.

Now, after 40 years of sleight of hand I am about as deft-fingered as a pickpocket, and one of my favorite amusements is extracting watches and stickpins from my friends.

Corks were popping merrily when my secret service escorts and I arrived in evening dress. Introduced as the entertainer of the evening, I performed at the various tables. Gradually I worked my way around to where the suspect sat beaming happily as he was singled out for special attention by the magician. I had the suspected spy stand up, pulled a couple of rabbits from his pocket, seemingly extracted deck after deck of cards and tossed the red and black pasteboards into the air. I then moved on to another table.

SPY UNDER ARREST

But I had taken something besides cards and rabbits from the suspect's pockets. I had confiscated a list of sailings of Yankee troop ships through my mastery of misdirection and the almost miraculous cunning of my trained fingers. That list of sailings no doubt saved hundreds of doughboys from a watery grave.

The spy was immediately arrested and interned for the duration of the war, and one of my most prized possessions is a letter of appreciation signed by the head of the Secret Service Bureau.

Turn to today's comic section and find out how you, too, may become a Secret Agent X-9. And follow the thrilling experiences of Thurston in the Boston Evening American.

HOTEL MEN SEE GOOD SEASON

Hotel men from all over New England meeting in Boston for their [illegible] annual convention [illegible] look for an unusual good season at the summer resorts this year.

This prediction is based upon the reports of great activity in the Florida hotels during the winter season, and upon the many inquiries and advance reservations being made by the public.

At the luncheon and business meeting of the Hotel Greeters Club held at the Copley-Plaza this afternoon, Paul R. Ere line of the Hotel [illegible], Springfield, was elected president of the Greeters Club for the coming year.

A party will be held in the Egyptian room of the Hotel Brunswick tonight with T. D. Green, president of the American Hotel Men's Association, as guest of honor.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

By LAWRENCE SHAW
National Director

Greetings Boys and Girls! Have you sent in your application to become a member of the Junior Birdmen, the new organization for children and youths between the ages of 10 and 21? If not you ought to do so at once. The application blank will be found on this same page. Follow its instructions and you will become a fledgling, a new member of the Junior Birdmen.

This organization is going to provide you with a lot of fun and let you exercise your interest in aviation. It's a new national movement to promote aviation in this country. By being a member you will be eligible to compete in various contests including an Aviation Puzzle contest, Guess the Aviator contest, Aviation Story contest, Scrapbook contest, Model Plane Building and Flying contest and other interesting competitions.

The first thing to do is find the application blank on this page, clip it out, fold a dime in a paper, attach the dime to the application blank (after writing your name, address and age, etc.) and send it in to the Boston Evening American.

Already one contest is underway. You can enter this contest by becoming a member of the Junior Birdmen, immediately.

This contest is a motto or slogan contest. If you younger boys and girls don't know what the word "motto" or "slogan" means, here are examples: "United we stand, divided we fall," "Preparedness is best of all," "My country first, last and always."

Now we want a motto for the Junior Birdmen and the four members who send in the best ones will get a free trip to New York and back, an overnight stay at a hotel in New York, and sight-seeing tours, a visit to the top of the Empire State building, the tallest building in the world, and everything you want to eat. Your stay also will include a visit to the national Junior Birdmen headquarters at 1834 Broadway, where greetings will be extended.

Rules of Contest Easy for Members

Here are the rules of the contest.

1—No boy or girl may compete in the Junior Birdmen National Motto Contest unless he or she is a member of the Junior Birdmen organization. Boys and girls who sent in applications but have not as yet received their membership may submit mottos. By the time the winners are chosen their membership will have been sent out and their names included on our records.

2—All mottos must be sent to the Junior Birdmen wing through which you are enrolled. Be sure you put the words "Motto Contest" in lower left hand corner of your envelope when you address it.

3—Members may send in as many mottos as they choose. Be sure to put your name and address on each list you send in.

4—In case of a tie, all tieing contestants will receive the full award.

5—Mottos may contain any number of words, but preferably ten words or less.

6—All mottos must be in the mail by Monday, midnight, April 30th.

7—Announcement of the winners of the local wing will be made in the junior birdmen column of Sunday, May 6th. Announcement of national winner will be made at a later date.

Wings and Members' Cards Go Out Soon

All of the boys and girls who have sent in their applications and their dimes will receive their wings and membership cards within a few days. The mail bags have been unusually heavy and the work of sorting, counting and filing the applications has kept a staff of clerks busy. We know you are impatient to receive your wings, but you will find they are well worth waiting for and when you pin them on your lapel or on your dress you will be the envy of all your school chums.

If your girl and boy friends haven't learned about the Junior Birdmen why don't you call their attention to it and ask them to join? Then later on you can form a squadron of your own and all of your friends will be in it. Just tell them to clip the application blank from this page, fill it out, attach a 10-cent piece to the application and send it to our headquarters.

We find some of the boys and girls forget to send in their dime with the application blank. This delays the sending out of their wings because it then becomes necessary to write to them and remind them.

In other cases some boys and girls forget to give their street address. In signing up to become a full-fledged Junior Birdman and a Junior Birdwoman be sure and read the application blank carefully. After you have it completed, show it to your mother or your dad and ask them if you have filled it out correctly.

Remember boys and girls that you must be at least 10 years of age and not more than 21. Those who are from 10 to 15 will be in Group B and those from 16 to 21 will be in Group A. The reason we have two groups is because it wouldn't be fair to have youths of 20 or thereabouts competing in our interesting contests with boys and girls of 10 or 11.

After you have sent in your application to join the Junior Birdmen keep watching this column for further announcements. In the meantime tell all your friends at school about this new aviation organization and the wonderful chance it offers to learn about flying and urge them to send in their applications.

We have more interesting [illegible] then, HAPPY LANDINGS.

Simple Language Wanted in Rushmore Epic Text

An excellent example of a Mount Rushmore Memorial competition text was that written by Gouverneur Morris, the well known author, and which was printed in The Boston Sunday Advertiser of April 1.

Style, clarity, expression and choice of words all were well illustrated in this splendid contribution.

It was not an official entry in the contest but was contributed by Mr. Morris as his "bit" toward helping those contemplating entering the competition.

Here it is necessary to [illegible] the attention of those who [illegible] wish to enter the contest that simple, everyday words [illegible] stand a better chance of obtaining recognition than long, hard-to-pronounce words and "flossy" language.

A handy fourteen page booklet [illegible] prepared as an assistance may be had by sending a self-addressed [illegible] cent stamped envelope to Rushmore Memorial Commission, [illegible] South Street, New York City.

This booklet contains the five episodes and other information pertinent to the contest.

Guard Veterans Meet Tomorrow

More than six hundred of [illegible] Massachusetts State Guard veterans, many of whom were on duty in Boston during the police strike years ago, will hold a convention at Medford tomorrow where they are to be entertained by the Medford association. There will be delegates present from 28 [illegible] which served at that time. The meeting will be held at the Medford Women's club clubhouse, Governors ave.

BUSTER KEATON AND DOROTHY SEBASTIAN TEAMED FOR COMEDY FEATURE

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

"As Thousands Cheer," the smashing [illegible] which [illegible] tenanted New York's Music Box Theater [illegible] September, will play Boston next September, and for the first time since [illegible] a musical show will have been booked for Boston for a longer visit than two weeks. Sam H. Harris plans to keep his greatest musical hit since "Of Thee I Sing" in town for a month. It is highly probable that the New York cast will arrive intact. Marilyn Miller, Clifton Webb, Helen Broderick and Ethel Waters are the featured artists and the hit song is "Easter Parade." Have you forgotten it?

Marilyn Miller

* * *

Perhaps I should have not been definite with my opening paragraph. I hear from [illegible] possible and [illegible] source that the new [illegible] "As Thousands Cheer" [illegible]. But J. J. Shubert, I understand, has taken to bed [illegible] at his failure to win [illegible] battle with the unions. It [illegible] that the "Monte Carlo Ballet Russe," which played the Boston Opera House, was [illegible] an operatic attraction [illegible] hands were paid off [illegible]ly. According [illegible] about $[illegible] a week. [illegible] favor of everyone [illegible] the best living possible if it proves practical, I certainly have [illegible] adverse comment to make about the stage-hands' success in winning their point.

* * *

I also hope that Mr. Shubert recovers and takes hope in the future. It certainly has not been a colossal season for him and his brother, Lee. Yet they have continued to operate theaters and stage and produce expensive shows. I should feel off [illegible] a million dollars as the Shubert production outlay for the past season. That includes "Hold Your Horses," the expensive "Annina," and a dozen or so others. "The Follies," a revue, and "No More Ladies," a comedy, have been their only [illegible] successes, and in dollars and cents I doubt whether either has been so notable.

In the Spring the Movie Fancy Lightly Turns to Themes of Love and Song

H. B. Warner and Winifred Shotte in the film, "Sorrell and Son," featured at Loew's State.

Montgomery Mystery Film

Vaudeville

In addition to the great motion picture "Men in White," Loew's Orpheum today has vaudeville, headed by Stuart and Lash in a comedy singing and dancing skit entitled "Believe It Or Nuts," in which they are assisted by Barbara O'Neil. Merman and Bronson follow with a musical presentation.

Midnight Burlesque

A midnight show will be given at the Park theater tonight at 11.30. "Madam Axel From Greece," starring Mae Brown, Nora Ford, Greenman and Fay Diamond and Fields is the burlesque attraction.

Sally Eilers Stars in Comedy, Jean Muir in Rural Drama, at Paramount-Fenway

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Remember those "transfer pictures" of childhood—against Pa's advice, you licked 'em, and presto, the picture laid upon the back of your hand! Much after that idea, "As the Earth Turns" lays its rural theme upon the screen. And it just would be Alfred E. Green who would pilot so astute a task as this turns out to be for Hollywood. Hence the new picture at the Paramount and Fenway, featured alongside of Sally Eilers in "Three on a Honeymoon," is something rather extraordinary for the West Coast studios.

* * *

Sally Eilers

The story is out of a novel about life on a Maine farm. As filmed, it is a simple and faithful saga of the soil, so realistic often that you seem to smell the new-turned furrows and the new-mown hay. This writer has a suspicion that the rapt attention of the audience at the Paramount yesterday was not only tribute to the power of Director Greens' opus, but had underlying reason in the love about all of us have for the out-of-doors, and unaffected, unsophisticated drama.

* * *

There hardly seems to be any plot, and yet at no point is there lack of interest. There is a criss-cross of emotions—the clash of natures of those that love the land, and those that hanker after the flesh-pots of the cities. But so finely are the roles handled and so acute is the green eye for the changing scene and the play of sky and earth and all that in them is, that you may set this down as a distinctive film document. Hollywood has turned out such movies but seldom; this one is vital and sweetly sentimental.

You should note, too, the Anton Tchekhov spirit with which the theme is handled: I do not recall any American film that hitherto has borne this touch.

* * *

For players, we find quite a large group, all so neatly dovetailed into the narrative that they do not seem to be acting. Jean Muir, making good on all her early promise, a very engaging heroine; David Landau, superb as the farmer; Donald Woods, himself giving promise of larger things in the movies; and a number of old-timers. Note the presence also of Dorothy Appleby, actress who happens to have come from Maine herself. She is the vamp in the story.

* * *

For the hilarity, Miss Eilers and assistants deliver the goods in "Three on a Honeymoon," the companion film on the new program. This is a shipboard story, with a blending of comedy and melodrama. Miss Eilers handles the romantic angle with skill, and delivers her lines with even more effectiveness than formerly. She has a great deal to do, and does it all well.

ZaSu Pitts serves up the laughs early and often—her "blazer cocktail" party is one of the comic highlights of the season. Among many others, Charles Starrett is noted (as the hero); Ben Bard, fine actor, is on hand, and also that capable youth, Johnny Mack Brown, giving an excellent account of himself.

Hollywood Film Has Place on Screen Beside French Movie

On the new Fine Arts program, opening yesterday, the unusual feat for that house is performed of contrasting a Hollywood picture with a foreign production. It so happens that both films come out with colors flying, each being distinguished in its field.

* * *

Colette Darfeuil

For merriment the movie, "Mirages de Paris" proves typically Gallic, but possess[illegible] Slavic [illegible] skill. This latter point comes through the direction by Fedor Ozep, the gentleman who is generally accredited with "discovering" Anna Sten. Of the Moscow school, he is particularly clever with his lenses, and the partnership of Russian director and French actors is a highly successful one.

Parisian night life furnishes the background for the picture which has abundant color and music. Romance and humor are interwoven, and the principal performers are Jacqueline Francell (recently reported as due for Hollywood), Roger Theville, Marcel Vallee and Colette Darfeuill.

The Hollywood picture "Dawn to Dawn," a most rare sort of movie, in that it emphasizes the power of the camera alone to portray emotions. It is a drama of three persons—Julie Hayden, an excellent actress who appeared in several photoplays, is the heroine—and is exquisitely acted, directed and photographed.

Tonight Elner Hansen, noted violinist, will be an added feature, appearing at 9 o'clock. His program will include a Cesar Franck sonata. Tomorrow morning Dr. Miriam Skirball lectures at the theater at 11 o'clock on the work of Gertrude Stein.

Prize Winner

Harry Goldstein

S. Charles Einfeld, of the executive staff of Warner Bros., has announced the award of a handsome prize valued at $125 in connection with the exploitation of the picture, "Footlight Parade." The competition aroused wide interest; the award goes to Harry Goldstein, manager of the Shawmut theater in Roxbury. His contest was adjudged the winner over many entries. The victor is brother of Jack Goldstein, of Keith's, himself the winner of the national RKO publicity prize of last year.

STOKOWSKI ENDS AIR SERIES

By N. F. T.

Last of the impressive coast to coast radio concerts by Leopold Stokowski and his big Philadelphia Orchestra, takes place through most of the afternoon hours today (WAAB), arranged as it is, to occupy the air right of way from 2 45 until 4 o'clock.

* * *

Leopold Stokowski

Compositions of Bach and Beethoven are chosen by the celebrated musical director with which to bring his 1933-34 broadcasting season to an auspicious finale. Bach's beautiful "Chaconne" and the stirring Ninth Symphony by Beethoven are the highlights. I am also advised that the latter effort is being augmented by vocalizing of the University of Pennsylvania Choral Society singers. Stowkowski plans a return to the network concert schedules early next fall, although a date has not been definitely decided upon at this writing.

* * *

IGLOO IMPRESSIONS

Buffoonery a la Phil Baker (nonsense to you) centers around an Eskimo drama tonight (WBZ) come 9 30, starring two honest-to-Arctic Eskimo actors. At least, so Baker says. Igloo thespians will be new program personalities, to be sure, and while the English diction may not prove exactly flawless, the fur-clad fellows may make good at that. Radio fever has even reached the far North, where fever isn't generally the fashion. Phil also promises to interpret anything listeners might not understand. What a man!

Jessica Dragonette, the popular NBC soprano, plays host to 600 Lehigh University alumni during her "mike" hour this evening (WEEI) between 8 and 9 o'clock. As a significant salute, the songstress is including a medley of Lehigh campus songs, aided by Frank Parker of the tenor tones and Rosario Bourdon's orchestra.

* * *

Much comment of one nature and another is abroad concerning the new studio staging of "Conflict," the T. S. Stribling serial story written especially for radio rendering. Tonight the plot (WNAC) takes in a thrilling Tennessee River episode with he-man rough and tumble situations aplenty and spirited suspense for the colorful climax.

* * *

This note serves to spike a rumor going the rounds that Baby Rose Marie is in reality Graham McNamee's older sister.

* * *

LOCAL LATHER

An ambitious worker in the Hub sound-sanctum vineyard has been slightly worried because of not getting much to do lately. He felt perhaps the dignified radio rahjahs hereabouts have cooled off about his style of performing. Whisperings just reach him through a pal that one of said conservative broadcasting bosses didn't approve a little bit when the chap slapped Gov. Ely lightly on the back after a certain gala program not so long ago. In the same breath our friend hastens to emphasize the added thought that the governor didn't mind at all — which fact is true, of course . . . Yankee Network forces (WNAC and WAAB) are strengthened a bit by the addition of a staff announcer named Tristram Coffin, likewise a young man possessing personable microphone presence and a naturalness the loudspeaker patrons will be likely to very much appreciate.

Veal Always Tempting Meal for Sunday

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

To market, to market and what will you buy for the Sunday dinner?

Veal is in season now and is a good suggestion for Sunday dinner. I wonder if we fully appreciate veal, its tastiness and delicateness. It is served very often in European countries and Creoles famous for their fine dishes also have many attractive ways of cooking it.

VERY LITTLE FAT

Veal does not contain much fat, therefore larding it either by placing slices of bacon or salt pork over the top or by inserting fat by means of a larding needle will increase the juiciness and flavor of this meat. Broiling is not recommended for veal because it does not contain much fat and because it has a tendency to dry out through evaporation.

Veal must be very well cooked to be appetizing, and it has an exquisite gravy which can be nicely browned, sour milk added to veal gravy gives a very delightful and different flavor. A touch of lemon is good with veal—carrots, spinach, spaghetti and rice are good accompaniments for it.

We suggest trying this recipe for Noodles on Onion Bed, which we made at our Martha Lee Cooking School last week, as a variation from ordinary methods of cooking this vegetable.

NOODLES ON ONION BED

- 1 pkg. wide noodles
- 4 tbsps. butter
- 3 Bermuda onions
- 1 tbsp. flour
- 2 eggs
- parsley

Boil the noodles in salted water and drain. Melt the butter in a frying pan and into it thinly slice the onions, separating the onion rings. Sift the flour over the onions and saute gently until tender and delicately brown. As the onions are cooking add one-quarter cup of hot water to the pan. This water is absorbed by the onions in cooking and makes them tender and transparent. Pour the beaten eggs over the onions and cook for a minute. Add the hot noodles and mix together. Serve on a platter, garnish with parsley.

ROAST LEG OF VEAL

Place the leg of veal, skin side up, on a rack in a roasting pan. Season with salt and pepper. If a thermometer is used, it will be necessary to have an opening in the pan through which it may be inserted. Place the roast in a hot oven (500 deg. F.) and sear without covering for 15 or 20 minutes. At the end of this time, reduce the oven temperature to that of a slow oven (300 deg. F.). Cover the roaster and continue cooking until the roast is done. When the thermometer registers 160 deg. F. the roast is done. Allow about 25 minutes per pound for cooking.

Housewives Find Prices Up; New Vegetables Offered

Meat prices in general at Faneuil [illegible] markets con[illegible] the[illegible] upward trend this week-end and market owners predicted [illegible] prices for next week because of the increased demand for lamb and beef.

Legs of spring lamb have jumped from 31 cents a pound to [illegible] and lamb kidney chops have gone to 6[illegible] cents a pound from last week's price of [illegible] [illegible] remain about the same at 45 cents a pound.

Prices of [illegible] have increased [illegible] cents a pound. [illegible] on the other hand have dropped from 25 cents to 60 cents a pound. Delmonico tenderloin steaks are a bit expensive for the ordinary household at $1.[illegible] a pound, but make an extremely appetizing meal when served with mushroom sauce.

Fowl prices remain the same at 28 cents a pound, as do capon at 42. Fresh-killed broilers have advanced 10 cents from 28 cents a pound to 38.

Vegetable and fruit prices fluctuated a good deal. Texas Bermuda onions are two pounds for a quarter, in comparison with last week's price of 10 cents a pound.

Green peas are 15 cents a pound and green bean prices dropped to two quarts for a quarter. Brocolli remains at 15 cents a pound.

Mexican cantaloupes (very tasty) are priced from 2[illegible] to [illegible] cents each piece depending on size. California cherry prices have dropped from 75 to 65 cents a pound. Louisiana strawberries remain 20 cents a pint.

For those of exacting tastes alligator pears may be had for as low as [illegible] cents apiece. Pineapples run from 25 cents to [illegible]. Oranges, apples and lemons are fairly cheap.

There is still a supply of Maryland soft shelled crabs selling at $1.50 a dozen and they seem very popular with housewives. Live lobsters are [illegible] cents and boiled may be had at [illegible] at some stalls.

VETS RALLY TO OFFSET RED MEETING

By MEL MATISON

Scarcely 300 yards will separate two gatherings as they converge on the Boston Common next Tuesday, one to be staged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, under the sponsorship of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and the other, a May Day labor parade and demonstration.

But a difference of purpose and an expected 21,000 difference in attendance will separate the gatherings.

The V. F. W., holding its third annual patriotic rally at the Parkman Bandstand on the Common, expects a crowd of 25,000 to hear such speakers as Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler, Lieut. Gov. Gaspar Bacon, Judge Franklin Miles, Commissioner of Immigration Mary Ward, and Carveth Wells.

The labor parade, comprised to a large extent of Communists, will protest labor conditions and endorse various local strikes. Many grammar and high school children will participate in the demonstration at the Charles st. Mall.

In addition to city and state protests against the children taking part in the labor demonstration, many civic organizations have voiced their disapproval. The V. F. W. annually stages its patriotic rally to offset the labor gathering.

300 PUPILS IN SPELLING BEE TITLE TEST

By SPELLING BEE EDITOR

Don't look now, grownups, but throughout Boston and 20 cities and towns within the eligible area of the National and Metropolitan Spelling Bee there are 300 young skippers who have the most serious faces on. Verily at Opportunity is knocking intently on the doors of 59 District Champions today and tomorrow any one of them is in direct line for the highest recognition ever offered Grade School spellers in this country.

In fact the situation is so intense that if any of these young contestants have any doubt about what they are supposed to do at any time during today's educational jousts, they had better call the Spelling Bee Editor at Liberty 4000.

FINALS ON MAY 12

Winners of the fifty-nine contests today will appear in the final competition for the title of Metropolitan champion of Boston which will be held in the Boston Garden on Saturday, May 12. On that day the winners of today's spelling bees will be presented with handsome silver medals and one of them will win the gold medal which is the open sesame to a score of advantages and distinctions.

Meeting the President of the United States, competing in the National Grade School Spelling Championship at Washington, D. C., and sharing in the division of a purse of $1700 to be divided among the 16 competing Champions in the National Spelling Bee, will all be incidental to a delightful educational vacation in the National Capitol, for a period of a week, accompanied by a parent, teacher or guardian.

CONFUSION LACKING

All of the arrangements for the foregoing advantages have been made by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser. It takes SOME spelling to get them and these newspapers are delighted to provide a suitable award for conscientious study and achievement.

Today's contests have been arranged with care and surely offer infinitely less possibility of confusion than the prior great spelling elimination tests the first of which involved more than 100,000 children. Every one of the hundreds of champions in that grade educational tournament have received copies of Webster's Collegiate Dictionary. The School Champions who are competing today have received certificates of merit and are daily receiving allotments of handsome bronze medals as rapidly as they can be suitably engraved.

During the last ten days every word of the Special Word List which will be used in today's spelling bees has appeared in either the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser under the signature of the Spelling Bee Editor.

PHONE FOR DETAILS

Certain it is that no gladiators in any type of competition whatever were ever more thrilled, resolute or confident than are the school champions in today's far-flung educational competition.

Every champion has a whole school full of fans, awaiting the returns.

Today all champions, if they have not already done so, are to learn from their principals at what time they are to report at their "assembly" schools. All principals—if uncertain—can immediately apply to the Spelling Bee Editor regarding that or any other detail of today's competitions. Call Liberty 4000.

Every detail of the entire operation has been made clear both in the Evening American and the Sunday Advertiser by direct communication with the "assembly" schools and by complete printed instructions. Any emergency adjustment of detail will be gladly made by the Spelling Bee Editor at any time during the day.

Advance congratulations to the 59 spelling wizards in today's really great competition! And to all of the 300, the best of "breaks" and luck in these somewhat breathless spell-downs of the day.

'Just Dogs' Come Into Own by Dint of Girls' Work

By PEGGY DOYLE

It's pretty certain that you know how things are, and by that I mean fiscal and social and just about everything. So stop me if I'm wrong in saying that Miss Mary Carraher, of 69 Horace rd., and Miss Janet Hyde, of 38 Horace rd., a couple of Belmont girls burn me up and knock me cold. They are 10 years old, not total but each, and if you'll accept my word for it they have everything.

A very long time ago, a man by the name of Sunset Cox said something about the fidelity of dogs. I mean actual living tail-waggers, who would die for you in a moment. And who are we after all if they hesitated a moment, or thought it over?

Well, sirs and mesdames, these two little girls, hardly old enough to know pups from thoroughbreds, decided last week that what this city needed more than anything else was a dog show of the ultra personal type. I mean a dog show in which honest markers and whiners, without a pedigree to bless themselves with, would have an opportunity to wring your heart by looking at you, just so and [illegible].

Now this was a noble plan, even though mental, but these two 10-year-olders decided to take action. They didn't stop until they had seen Mayor Mansfield who, if the political bulletins are correct, might be depended upon only to dock the tails of such bone-munchers as might choose to show their woolly wares in any undistinguished canine tournament.

Now, get me right, don't misjudge the mayor, give an eye to the pups and plenty of credit to Miss Carraher and her friend, Miss Hyde. On the basis of the magic of their words a dog show is going to take place on the mall side of the Common of a Saturday. Not some other Saturday, but tomorrow.

No one is asking anything of you bystanders except to take a look at these pups who haven't a thing in the world to offer except everything that anyone ever wanted. And by that I mean—and Sunset Cox said—loyalty, unquestioned obedience, friendship beyond measurement and a brace of eyes so honest that the heart quails in guilt at the sight of such unselfish devotion.

There is no charge, just a credit. And the names of the ladies as I have so frequently said are Miss Carraher, ten, and Miss Hyde, ten and a half.

People talk about the dwindling of initiative, the frustration of sentiment and the general whither-are-we-drifting.

Am I laughing?

MULLONEY STOCK DEAL REVEALED

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

I wish we could have more teachers in our public schools, even if only temporarily, like Mr. Noel G. Cottrell of Birmingham, England, who is an exchange teacher in the Newton high school. The other day he spoke to a meeting of high school principals at the Framingham State Teachers' College on the way they do it in England.

Robert E. Rogers

The way they do it in England is never to be sneered at. Today, for instance, England is balancing its budget, reducing its welfare expenditures, increasing business and foreign trade, all on plain traditional economic lines, the lines of experience and common sense, without any of the elaborate and mystifying hocus-pocus being indulged in in Washington. In time they will probably get round to settling their war debts, once they feel their own economic basis is secure and once they believe their money won't merely be poured into the bottomless pit of the New Deal.

National character tends to be all of a piece, and perhaps we may see in Mr. Cottrell's words about England's English the secret of why they muddle through as well as they do. The answer seems to be discipline, for one thing. Mr. Cottrell pointed out that "in England the teachers make the rules and enforce them without appeal. Over here the 'student government' or just the students decide policies which the teachers find impossible to enforce." That sounds as if Mr. Cottrell has had some bitter or amusing experience over here.

He points out, too, that the English students play games for the game's sake, whether there are any spectators or not, without the ballyhoo of grandstands, bands, cheer-leaders and newspaper spreads. He seems to think the English method is rather more an example of sportsmanship. He points out that girls in school are expected to behave and look like schoolgirls. There is no make-up, there are no party dresses worn to classes. Identical uniforms and plain coiffures keep the girl from looking like an imitation of a society debutante.

He suggests also that one of the successes of education results from open and stiff competition. The English system of competitive scholarships, for instance, is an enormous aid to the building not only of scholarship but of character. And he suggests that over here an honor student rates a kind of diploma quite superior to the one given to the athlete or the playboy or the girl-about-town, who stay in school because the law requires it and just manage to skim through with the help of a system of impressionistic grading such as obtains in Newton.

* * *

Over here competition, selectivity, distinguishing certificates, are held to be snobbish and undemocratic, likely to break the spirit of the incompetent, the lazy, the feeble minded and the nervous, who consider themselves just as good as everybody else. In Lynn the attempt has been made to jumble all the college preparatory students with the rest, to abolish the terms Latin school and high school, because it makes the college preparatory students feel superior. Could the worship of a shibboleth go further? I wish we could have a lot of English men teachers over here, using our schools as a laboratory, to show us what education can be like under the English slogan: "Law, order, duty and restraint, obedience, discipline."

* * *

I want to take the rest of the column today to thank an anonymous correspondent who, apparently, really reads me. He sent me a postcard containing a clipping from this column of a few days a week to the effect that first of the reasons for Mr Roosevelt's success is that he had Roosevelt blood in him.

Below that he quotes a line or two from my column of June 22, 1932, as follows: "You could exchange a baby born in one of the earliest Egyptian dynasties with one born today and you would find the Egyptian baby no more and no less competent to deal with present day conditions and a child of today no shining light among the people who lived before Abraham."

First my sincere appreciation to a reader who has either a superb memory or a good file of these writings and who is interested even in what I wrote two years ago. For one person, at least, I have reared a monument (like Horace) more enduring than brass.

* * *

But, for the rest, I really do not see the relevance of the deadly parallel. The quotation of two years ago merely means what all anthropologists allow, that man's acquired characteristics have not changed the essential nature of his brains. There has been no real progress which would make a man of today fundamentally superior to one of ten thousand B. C.

But that has nothing to do with the fact that aptitudes surely run in families. The case histories of noted families cannot be gainsaid. Blood and family habit are facts which have nothing to do with the evolution of ability in man. The great political families in England, the Cecils for instance, result from inheritance and family habit. The Bachs in music The Jonathan Edwards descendants. The whole tribe of the Adamses. The even more interesting tribe of Beechers. Think of the historic vitality of the Hapsburgs and Hohenzollerns. Think again of the great families of craftsmen, like the makers of the Agassiz Museum glass flowers, or the Wedgewoods, etc.

No, it won't wash. Thank you for the compliment of remembering what I write, but the present illustration is not a fortunate one.

Mayor to Quit Social Functions

Mayor Mansfield will abandon the social end of his job on May 1 and in future will limit himself to attendance at functions of special importance or significance, he announced today.

GREAT PLOT TO EVADE LIQUOR LAW CHARGED

Retail Stores Complain at Hearing; Other Hill News

Charges that a gigantic scheme is underway in Massachusetts to evade laws governing the sale of alcoholic beverages and to monopolize the entire state liquor business were made today before the State Alcohol Beverages Control Commission by representatives of the Lawrence Retail Package Store Assocation and the Lawrence Licensing oBard

Gov Ely today signed a bill making licenses of innholders and common victuallers co-terminous with licenses granted for the sale of alcoholic beverages. Common victuallers licenses were granted for one year to expire April 30. The bill, state-wide in scope, changes the expiration date to Dec. 31, the same as the liquor licenses.

Without debate, the House accepted an adverse report on a bill which would have changed the expiration date of motor vehicle registrationos from Dec. 31 to March 31.

A bill to curb the activities of chicken thieves by requiring anyone transporting them to have a bill of sale was accepted today by the House.

In a letter to Police Commissioner Hultman, three members of the legislature today asked that all officers not on motorcycle duty be issued long blue trousers in place of the short breeches with leggings.

Declaring the Legislature has been 'dominated too long by reactionary millionaires," Rep Harold E Cole, Republican, of Taunton, today issued a blast against Speaker Leverett Saltonstall's decision to again seek the speakership in preference to running for the G O P nomination for governor or lieutenant-governor.

The challenge flung down to organized labor by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, was picked up today by Robert J. Watt, legislative agent and secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor.

"The bitterness of Mr. Sloan's attack against the American Federation of Labor makes me strongly suspect that the rosy picture he (Sloan) paints of wages and conditions of work in the automobile industry is not based on fact," Watt declared.

Boston PWA Jobs Believed Doomed

Public Works Administration officials at Washington indicated today that several housing projects including several in greater Boston would be rejected.

The following are believed to be doomed:

WOMEN VOTERS BAR U. S. AID FOR SCHOOLS

Study of Finance to Equalize Burden Is Urged; Parley Closes

Voting not to support legislation seeking federal aid for public education in the present emergency, the National League of Women Voters today wound up one of the most active meetings of its convention now under way in Boston.

Previous to this action, the convention voted to have a study made of school finances, equalization of the burden of school support, school systems of cities and federal emergency projects

The necessary two-thirds vote which would have enlisted the league's support of the federal government in its plan to help finance the public schools was not obtained, in spite of a spirited plea by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Washington, D. C., vice-president of the league and acting chairman of the education department.

Most of the opposition came from the New York, Wisconsin and Illinois delegations, whose claim was that the subject had not been a matter of study for a long enough period of time.

Miss Gertrude Ely of Bryn Mawr, Penn., speaking in support of the measure said that thousands of children would be without schooling unless federal aid was received Ohio has "been fooling around for 16 months doing nothing about it," said Mrs. Malcom McBride, of Cleveland, also speaking in favor of it.

In her plea to move the league to vote for the measure, Mrs. Doyle, the vice-president, recalled a statement of Dr George Zook, U S commissioner of education, which he made earlier in the week, that it was common knowledge that many of the states had refused to "clean house" in the [illegible] of schools

CHECK BY C. OF C. HITS AIR MAIL

Strong opposition to the present handling of air mail by Army flyers, and an almost united expression that the change has hampered many business firms was revealed today in a survey conducted by the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Chairman W. Clarke Arwater of the chamber's committee on aviation stated many replies received contained specific instances of the adverse effect the present system has on their individual business and demand the immediate return to private operation of the air mail service.

A summary of the replies received has been sent to Senators David I. Walsh and Marcus A. Coolidge for action in event of any legislative action which may be taken.

"Curtailment of the service has been confusing."

"Slowing up of the service has hampered us in getting quick action."

"It has caused us considerable inconvenience."

"It has been a definite disadvantage to us."

Keep Convention Moving

NOMINATED FOR THE PRESIDENCY

It is very likely that today will find Miss Marguerite M. Wells, the new president of the National League of Women Voters. The committee on nomination reported her as unopposed for the office. Unless a sticker campaign pops up—you are now looking at the next president.

Boy 'Shoots Up' Shop, Ends in Woodshed

A six-year-old bad man, who shot up the Tubular River Co. plant in Wollaston this morning, was sitting down in a very gingerly fashion this afternoon, following a woodshed conference with his dad.

Sauntering along, he paused for a look through the windows of the plant.

What annoyed him, nobody will ever know. But all of a sudden, he whipped out a revolver and let go. The bullet missed several workmen by inches. It hit a machine. There was a wild stampede.

Scampering briskly off, in the wake of excitement, he had done a lively 50 yards when one of the menaced workmen caught him and took the gun away.

Unloading the cartridges, he returned it to the boy, slapped him on that part of the anatomy ideally adapted to the reception of slaps, and started him home

The boy hid for hours in a plant nearby.

Finally he went home to Linden st., in Wollaston. A reception committee, consisting of Pa and Ma, was waiting.

CLERK TELLS OF B.-M. SHARES AT HEARING

Jury Gets Evidence Over Objections of Defense Counsel

Stock transactions of Daniel C. Mulloney, accused former president of the Federal National Bank, as listed on the books of the brokerage house of F. S. Moseley Co., in 1931 engaged the attention of opposing counsel and Judge Hugh D. McLellan and a jury in Federal court today.

Birney S. Hallowell of the Moseley Co., identified insertions in a ledger of that concern of Boston & Maine stock sold to Mulloney on April 17, 1931.

Shown a ledger sheet for examination, Taylor identified his own handwriting. Referring to one item on the sheet Taylor said it referred to a "record of shares of stock received from Mr. Mulloney, written April 24, 1931"

Protest against admissibility of ledger sheet by Romney Spring, of counsel for Mulloney, led to a conference with Judge McLellan and Prosecutor McCann at the bench, resulting in the sheet being admitted as evidence.

The sales record concerned 100 shares of Boston & Maine and Brooklyn Rapid Transit stock as sold by Mulloney in 1931. The sheet was shown the jury for inspection.

NEW LIFER ON LAUNDRY JOB

Edward T. Stanislewski whose sentence to the electric chair was commuted to life imprisonment by Gov. Ely, went to work today in the laundry at State Prison, washing clothes for the inmates

The former Providence College athlete who was convicted of a slaying in Amherst, is the 152nd "lifer" at State prison.

John T. Garrick, who was sentenced to 18 to 20 years after pleading guilty to manslaughter in the holdup slaying of a Somerville filling station attendant for which slaying Herman Red Snyder and John Donnellon were executed, has been put to work in the prison kitchen.

Boy'd Rather Be Cop Than Eat

Wonders will never cease

A three-year-old youngster, Daniel O'Leary, of 2 Shepard st., Brighton, who was picked up today as a lost child in Commonwealth ave., Brighton, and held until his mother called six hours later, declined offers of ice cream, candy and other dainties—yet had the time of his young life "playing cop."

Danny wasn't bit frightened

"What? No ice cream?" the officers asked him. "Nope," was the boy's repeated answer. "Me play policeman."

Mrs. Nellie O'Leary, the boy's mother, found him when she called at the station to report his absense.

NEW YORK

New York, April 27—Thoughts while strolling: Has anyone ever seen Mr. Katharine Hepburn? Will and Betty Rogers' daughter Mary resembles Joan Bennett. And Edna Best and Betty Starbuck look alike. Guthrie McClintic never slips his arms into his overcoat sleeves. Jaunty like

O. O. McIntyre

One word description of George Arliss — trippy. All the aviators say Lindbergh will never die in the air. Morris Gest answers the phone with a French "Allo" The new kid star, Imogene Coco. That legless Broadway beggar, Juju. I like to hear Dorothy Hall's petulant whine

Cholly Knickerbocker thinks Ellin Mackay Berlin the most intelligent woman in New York society. And the most distinguished looking, if you ask me. The depression brings more people than ever to the park zoo. The first time I saw a tiger I wanted to stroke the "nice pussy!"

The fuss over Bock beer and I know no one who really likes it! An autographed Poe book in Putnam's for $2500 What the author could have done with that sum! The Germans call daylight saving: sonnenuntergangverderbenpraxis. Frank Crowninshield's lapel cornflower.

One of my favorite people—Cobina Wright. I rarely fail to filch a headline passing a newsstand. Grantland Rice's nickname is "Granny." Vincent Astor seems the only one left with a yacht. Sign on movie front: "Our ushers let you alone!' Hooray! That white dot is my hat sailing over Passaic!

• • •

Just as everybody who goes to Hollywood pants to meet Charlie Chaplin, so do most visitors to New York want a peep at or a handshake with Al Smith. This is especially true of foreign visitors. While Smith has been forced to raise certain barriers, he probably meets more out-of-towners daily than any other man in New York. Due largely to the fact his offices are in mid-town and that several thousands a day ride up to the Empire Tower. For some time he used to loiter in the lobby to smoke an after-luncheon cigar, but word got about and he had to abandon that.

• • •

Another celebrity focal point is the Algonquin dining rooms at luncheon time where extravagant log-rolling has exploited in the magazines and press that all the literati may be found there. There is a refreshingly pepperminty gathering always but as a matter of fact more distinguished authors and contributors of magazines are found in the sedate Coffee House Club and The Players.

• • •

At the Lambs luncheon hour there is also a round table, rimmed by the leading actors of the day. This is usually presided over by Gene Buck, who has not missed lunching at the Lambs, when in town, for 21 years. Wilton Lackeye once boasted that he had never lunched but three other places in New York. While the Lambs midday meal is called luncheon it is mostly breakfast for those filling engagements.

• • •

But for racketty kix ko-ax ko-ax, give me the clattery uproar of any mid-town automat at lunch time Everybody is immediately denuded of false grandeur by becoming at once his own waiter. And do not imagine for a moment the patrons are all from some vague obscurity. I have seen C. B. Dillingham there in his most opulent days. Also W. C. Fields, Jerome Kern, Berton Braley and Sime Silverman. And the oddities of chance of Monte Carlo's roulette are no more diverting than the automat's nickel-in-the-slot clicks, and certainly far more expensive.

• • •

For the young lovers of an older New York, to my notion, there was no luncheon place equalling Claremont, now being converted into a cheaper wayside eatery. It is an old white colonial day structure deep in years but living briskly in the motor tide of today's life. Beautifully set on the left bank of the Hudson, it was as sparkling with romance as the river below. One of the very few places where Mrs. Fiske and Maud Adams were ever seen in public when they were at the peak of careers.

• • •

• • •

Copey at 74 Reads All Day

"Copey" was 74 today.

Prof. Charles Townsend Copeland, whose Harvard pupils down through the years formed the Copeland Association, spent the day quietly going over his English literature collection.

This magician with words, this actor without gestures, this man with an alumni association all his own, he whose readings are internationally famous, retired from teaching six years ago.

Death and Profits Are Linked in New Work

By GILBERT SELDES

I DO not review all the books my brother writes, but his new one "Iron, Blood, and Profits," is dedicated to his niece and nephew "when they grow up," and so it has a special call on my interest for "when they grow up," the world may be crashing to destruction and this book tells one of the reasons. It is a study of the international racket in munitions of war which I would call masterly except for fear of being myself called prejudiced. So I confine myself to saying that the mere array of facts is appalling.

* * *

IN 1918 my brother was at Eddie Rickenbacker's headquarters and heard a British aviator tell of the French failure to bombard the Briey area—the center of Germany's supply of iron and steel. In the 18 years which have passed he has learned several things: that without the metal from this area Germany could not have lasted more than 18 months, perhaps two years at the outside; that these mines were internationally owned and that French patriots influenced the French military command to spare the mines; that after two years of leaving the Germans unmolested in the Briey basin, bombardments were so skillfully carried out that they did almost no damage whatever.

In return, the Germans failed to bombard the French mining area at Pas-de-Calais — the same Franco German-international gang owned these mines also.

* * *

HE learned that during the war right in the middle of it patriotic German manufacturers sold munitions of war to the French, and patriotic Englishmen sold munitions of war to the Germans—through neutrals of course. And that the blockade was never really enforced until America entered the war and insisted.

Hilaire Belloc says: "Whoever in the second half of the war has lost a son or a brother or a husband can blame it on the politicians, or the men of wealth whom they obeyed, for the manner in which they conducted the blockade at the beginning of hostilities . . . It is history."

* * *

A FEW weeks ago I noted here the "Amens" and "Hear! Hears" of British stockholders when they received news of profits in armament and superior shells. I do not believe that armament makers, alone, are powerful enough to create wars; they are only the spearhead of economic forces, habits of mind, ingrained traditions, desires, greeds, and ambitions. But here, at last, is the proof that a small group of extremely influential people actually make money out of death and destruction.

In the present state of the world there can be no halfway place between absolute, total, international disarmament and the race of arms in which we are engaged. The only modifier possible is the one toward which "Iron, Blood, and Profits" tends—that is, remove the profits. It may not prevent wars; but at least the generation which is going to be maimed and destroyed fifteen years from now will not have to suspect that they suffered for someone else's dollars.

Corporal Punishment

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT has lost the premier position it formerly held as an educational force! Sensitive America frowns these days on the rattanning of legs, the rulering of palms and the paddling of posteriors. Parents are recognizing the fact that these practices are beneficial mostly to the teachers in affording them an easy means of relieving themselves of fits of temper.

Yet the practice still lingers in many sections, particularly in the smaller communities. For example it is revealed in the request for bids on school supplies of the Butler County school board in Pennsylvania. They recently asked for prices on paddles to be used on the children. (Although, to do them justice, they specified that the punitive instruments be made of soft pine not more than a quarter inch in thickness.)

But this is as nothing compared to what the Minister of Education at Sydney, Australia, contemplated. He actually considered the purchase of automatic spanking machines, operated by a lever which swishes a cane on schoolroom sinners with any desired force! W. E. F.

Calligraphy

I FOUND a fossil shell among
Hepaticas the newest sprung
Of all the blue stars and the white
Opening on the edge of night.
The shell lay there, another flower
Beside these measured by an hour,
And there was neither youth nor age
On this April evening's page.

The scallop of forty million years,
The hepaticas with April's tears
Upon them still and young to life,
Were carven by the selfsame knife.
Time was nothing, years were not,
And beauty lay outside the thought
Housed in my moment of a brain.
The architect of this day's rain
Is the same one who designed
The law and music of his mind
On shells that starred an ancient sea
And blossom now in the eyes of me.

ALLOW ME TO SAY

Time to Think of Escape From the City, Says

CHAS. HANSON TOWNE

THIS is the season of the year when those fascinating pamphlets begin to arrive telling of "dude" ranches in the Far West, of nice little houses that may be rented in the country, of inns in New England where the food is simple yet good, and the pictures reveal quiet lakes and shadowy lawns, and one looks from one's city windows at the drab expanse of rooftops and sighs for the open road.

The forsythia has come and gone, and the apple and cherry trees are about to show their bright abundance, and we know that the great congregation of the grass has long since settled down to watch the beautiful pageant of summer swing through the world. We see a few window-boxes in the city, with upstanding geraniums merely hinting of the flowery procession elsewhere; and if we have any imagination at all we long to run away to sylvan solitude, and let the dingy old town take care of itself as best it can.

There have been tulips and hyacinths in the Park—joyful little reminders of the larger prospect out where the city ends, and we wish that some magic carpet could rush us to a magic garden in the sun. We remember that [illegible] road we found last year and we wonder if the lilac bushes are as lavish as they were, and if the same friendly dog would come out to trot along by our side, if we should shake the dust from our shoes and find our way there.

There was a tiny white house that we had always dreamed of as our own some day. Is the same old lady walking down her phlox-trimmed path, opening the gate that always clicked and are the young people playing tennis or croquet behind their hedge? It was a picture we never tired of, and it is photographed on our mind.

* * *

THEN, a little farther on, there was the house with the duck-pond and the green spreading lawn, shaded by giant oak-trees and poplars, and a bed of purple iris dreaming in the sun. Is the rock-garden flourishing this year, placed so that the casual passerby can view it on his evening stroll?

And what of that old stone bridge, where we liked to loiter as the sun went down, watching the changing tints over the water, waiting for the golden ball to drop at last beneath the rim of the world? Curious how we recall each fading moment, how they are all engraved in memory. And stranger yet how, when we first came to that red house with its riot of vines, we felt we had seen it in some previous incarnation and said to ourself some lines of Rossetti:

I have been here before,
But when or how I cannot tell:
I knew the grass beyond the door,
The sweet, keen smell,
The sighing sound, the lights around the shore.

Had we been here, or was it only a trick of the brain? It didn't matter. We got a certain ecstasy out of the feeling; and whether or not we were a ghost coming back to view an old scene, we knew we were here and that was all that counted.

* * *

IF we are to be held in the city's iron grasp when June, July and August repeat their lovely stories there will be moments when we can escape. If the pavements and the brick and mortar hold us during the week we can take our work to the hills for brief visits, and be satisfied with glimpses of the quiet roads we used to know so well. Better a nodding acquaintance than none at all. An ancient gnarled oak will be waiting for us. Like a green book, it only waits to be read. Its tattered inscriptions will be there long after we have passed on. The red repetitions of the rose will be ours for the asking, so generous is good old Mother Nature.

Liquor Advertising Perfect But Too Conservative

For JAMES M. CAIN

BY any fair standard the liquor ads are models for all business to pattern after. Perhaps a somewhat distorted point of view is responsible but you can't get away from it that the advertising is quiet, refined and polite. It does not try to frighten you into believing that you will commit a social error if you do not serve a particular brand and it does not claim that this particular brand will make athletes to[illegible].

It is restricted as a rule from snob appeal; most of it refrains from hinting that this is the smart drink at Mayfair, Long Beach and Palm Beach. It tells its story simply, briefly and modestly: the firm has been in existence since 1831, the liquor is made from the finest materials, it tastes good and it can be relied on providing you insist on this label. If there is such a thing as praiseworthy advertising, this is it.

SO it is, and it bores me stiff. A lot of water went under the mill between 1929 and 1933, and advertising went with the current and even swam ahead of it. It learned in those gay years how to entertain us. It showed us pictures of countesses and facsimiles of their signatures. It showed us how to get rid of onion smell. It taught us parlor tricks. It showed us how leather looks under a magnifying glass. It showed us how to tell which of two lines is the longer, a fascinating pastime.

Best of all it recently found out that we love a story. Friends, I dote on its stories. I suffer with the wife whose husband frowns at the napkins with traces of last week's lipstick on them, and get a leap of hope when her best friend suggests Sudso. I go through an agony of suspense to see how Sudso works. I shout hurrah when Sudso does work and I have to gulp back my tears over the happy, reunited family, all wiping their snouts on clean napkins . . .

Brewers, can you match that? Distillers, do you expect me to respond to your impeccable grammar, after Sudso has reached my heart? . . .

Of course, what I actually spend my money on is liquor, not Sudso. Just the same, I like advertising with a punch.

NATIONAL ART

Painters Record Traits of Their Land

By HAVELOCK ELLIS

LONDON.—Various friends have been communicating to me their impressions of the recent Exhibition of British Art, extending from about the year 1000 to 1860. My friends, I find, are chiefly concerned to note changes in their reactions to individual artists, and this is intelligible since such estimates have varied widely with periods and fashions, not only in England but also among foreigners.

I can verify this in my own experience. Many years ago a French art critic who came to see me noted on my wall the etching of Burne-Jones's "Merlin and Vivien"—it was a picture that had come to me in youth as a revelation—and he remarked "In future ages when men think of English art they will say 'Burne-Jones'!"

In more recent times a distinguished French art critic Elie Faure, has dismissed Burne-Jones as "a sentimental Mantegna crossed with a Puritanic Botticelli." He would place Gainsborough as a more genuine representative of English art at its best.

* * *

I SUPPOSE I am myself influenced by these shifting currents, for the Burne-Jones etching has long ago disappeared from my wall and in its place I acquired a drawing by Gainsborough, though certainly my attraction to that artist goes far back, I like indeed to fancy it rooted in the fact that his family was associated with my own forefathers in the same small Suffolk town.

Yet Burne-Jones, too, really represented the British spirit in art, its detailed realism, its romanticism, its affinity to the genius of poetry.

That brings us to the point I had in mind at the outset: the relation of art to the national character. If I hold in mind the impressions left by the superb show of French art two years ago, how does British art affect me?

NO doubt the outstanding fact remains that we are here held by half a dozen individual artists. They were often largely self-trained men of original genius, who had their own vision and their own way of expressing it, a way that was apt to run into extravagance, into what was regarded as English eccentricity. Thus they stood apart and neglected in their own age or at first only recognized abroad.

Constable, one of the greatest, is typical. He saw landscape Nature with his own eyes and he made the prime discovery that the juxtaposition of contrasting colors became harmonized by the eyes in vision and produced a living freshness of aspect never attained in painting before. His countrymen saw little in it, but in France it was an instantaneous revelation to Delacroix, and the discovery influenced French painting for eighty years. William Blake, a little earlier in a different field of art, was so profoundly original that he seemed to most people little better than a madman; a century later he has become the subject of endless study and his productions of almost inestimable value.

Putting them aside, there is no organized and recognized effort to attain any great ends of art. As we wander through these rooms we see a domestic atmosphere prevailing, an abundance of family portraits, a love of illustration, descriptive, sentimental, romantic, sportive, caricatural. And all guided by a hand ready to yield to varied influences from home or abroad. Burne-Jones was born in Birmingham but he brought the Mabinogian of his ancestral Wales on to his canvases. We are really, for the most part, in the presence of the practical flexibility of a nation made for craftsmanship rather than for the so-called "fine" arts. Reynolds, who did so much for English art, with his accomplished superficiality and affectation, dominates the scene.

* * *

I HAVE often seemed to belittle the "fine arts," and to insist that all life, all doing, is of the nature of art. But the "fine" arts still have their significance even for those who are concerned with national character, as, one way or another, all of us must be.

READING-WRITING

By WILLIAM SOSKIN

EVEN to himself a writer is a mysterious being. He keeps wondering what strange process it is that gives him the right and the ability to record his emotions for the world to see. He keeps asking himself whether or not he is like other men. He regards himself as something of a museum piece. See, he says, this is how I sit at the type writer. This is what I eat. That is where I sleep. From nine to twelve in the morning I create. At noon I lunch. At one I nap. Und so weiter.

Usually the writer's life is rather a dull affair of no special social significance. Occasionally, however, a writer will combine extraordinary literary ability, prominence in the world of letters, unusual social distinction or position in life. Occasionally the writer will represent some social phenomenon beyond the production of a half dozen or so books. Then we have a life story as absorbing and rich as Edith Wharton's autobiography, A Backward Glance, published today.

Edith Wharton is generally known as a writer of excellent taste, of careful and graceful diction, whose mildly satirical novels of New York society and whose story of New England, Ethan Frome, suggested that she might rise to an important position in American letters.

But the story of that rise of a daughter of old New York society in the literary field, the history of Mrs. Wharton's fairly recent novel, Hudson River Bracketed, and her more recent short stories to be dull, tepid affairs. I find this autobiography warm and real.

* * *

FROM a picture of the upper-bourgeois society of New York of the period Mrs. Wharton goes on to tell of her invasion of the literary field, of her initiation into the work of Huxley, Spencer, Haeckel and Westermarck, of her association with such editors as Edward Burlingame, of Scribner's, and such collaborators as Clyde Fitch. Her married life was a full one, but she craved the intellectual excitement, the salons and the seminars of London and Paris.

And so we are treated to a delicious series of intimate communions with Henry James sweating away in the Summer's heat; with Thomas Hardy, complaining of the editorial censoring of Jude the Obscure; with Howard Sturgis and Max Beerbohm and the best wits of London; with Meredith himself; with Geoffrey Scott, the exquisite humanist, and with the best scholars and mental showmen of France. It is a very gaudy pageant.

Mrs. Wharton revels in its splendor. "Life," she says, "is the saddest thing there is next to death; yet there are always new countries to see, new books to read (and I hope to write), a thousand little daily wonders to marvel at and rejoice in . . ."

A gallant lady.

MORE PREJUDICES

By EMIL LUDWIG

LOCARNO. In my last article I discussed the almost general prejudice against prejudices and defended certain prejudices, those spontaneous ones that spring from our emotions and not from imitations or because they happen at the moment to be the fashion.

We've all had the experience, for example, of having our friends praise a man highly, tell us nothing but good things about him. Then when we first meet him we instinctively dislike him. What shall we do about it? We conquer our hesitation, we try to recognize his good qualities, gradually we find him better than we thought at first and yet a day will come when that first antipathetic feeling will justify itself. Anyone whom we decidedly dislike in that first uninhabited moment may later rise in our estimation but he will never become our friend. And though this is a prejudice, there is a morsel of truth to our feelings.

* *

THE same thing holds true of landscapes, flowers, animals, food, music, furniture. There are people who like cactuses or monkeys. Should I feel a distinct aversion to both, then this prejudice of mine will turn me against people who collect cactuses or admire monkeys. This is entirely justified, for an inclination or aversion to such remarkable specimens of nature may be rooted deep in our souls. I could never be friendly with a person who had an aversion to dogs, but I can imagine that an enemy of dogs may feel the same toward me, because I am constantly surrounded by them.

On this account one ought never to force children to eat foods to which they have a natural antipathy; for it is precisely in our five senses that our most intimate feelings show themselves, especially when they are subject to very strong and very individual reactions. Whoever cannot eat artichoke, smell cabbage, touch satin, or hear a scream without having gooseflesh, ought not, even in childhood, to be forced in Spartan fashion to withstand those very things. Rather they ought to be protected from them, because indefinable instincts are hidden here, which later recur as determining factors in feelings toward the opposite sex.

A man sits in a cafe and sees another man passionately in love with a woman whom he himself finds antipathetic. This can happen without his having spoken to or known the people, simply by observation; and it reveals the intuitions which will repeat themselves in hundreds of small prejudices in daily life.

The art of it is this: to nurture these individual prejudices for the protection and heightening of one's own personality, and on the other hand to thrust aside all preconceived ideas acquired at second hand.

In a City Street

COURAGE steady as the stars
I saw with you, sustained
Against the world, its ups and downs
The kindly or the cruel towns,
And only love remained . . .
Courage was a color seen
With you across the nights,
And now, alone, I stand like one

Charles Divine.

To a Ruminant

I'LL reassure you—there are some Advantages to chewing gum.
For when the both of us are mum,
And when the silence waxes deep—
Why, I don't have to take a peep
To see—I hear you're not asleep.

Hal Chadwick.

VAGABONDIA

Palace in Venice Has Gone to the Dogs

By BRUNO LESSING

ROME.—Came down from Venice by train. Left Venice around 10 p. m. and arrived in Rome at 9 a. m. Went straight to bed to get some of the sleep that I didn't get on the train. A railroad train is a wonderful invention. A bed that stands still is even a greater invention.

Took a little motorboat from the hotel in Venice to the station. $3.50. Would gladly have started an hour earlier and taken a gondola because it's fun to glide through the dark canals at night and hobnob with the ghosts of the past. But gondoliers always want to sing at night. They have the romantic complex developed by years of association with tourists. Many people feel sentimental when they hear a gondolier sing Santa Lucia or Mamma Mia. I don't. I prefer to have the gondolier concentrate on gondoliering. If you let him sing you've got to pay a fat tip. If you suppress him he gets sulky—not because he wants to sing but because he wants the tip.

* * *

THE Doges' Palace, my favorite among the world's buildings, is slowly losing its color. In the course of centuries its terra-cotta hue turned into a beautiful pink. That pink is now fading. In the moonlight that wonderful palace is transformed into a spooky white. The moon also plays strange tricks upon the colors of St. Mark's. In fact, that whole great square looks ghostly as you glide by it.

Most of the palaces along the Grand Canal were shuttered—not a gleam of light. The wealthy owners are absent. Maybe some are in New York trying to negotiate a loan and maybe some are in Hollywood having a swell time. In my next book, Advice to Multi-Millionaires, I shall urge them all to have a palace in Venice. Even if they never go there it will give them a romantic thrill—which is what multi-millionaires need.

* * *

ALL settled in the train compartment fifteen minutes before starting. Out came the old typewriter and I was just in the right mood to give you a colorful account of moonlight in Venice. But after three minutes of clicking the keys the porter knocked on the door and said that the elderly lady in the next compartment was terribly nervous and couldn't stand listening to a typewriter. He added that she was a countess. Well it isn't nice to disturb an elderly lady even if she is a countess. So the typewriter went back into its box. And now I've forgotten what I intended to write.

When the train started I made two discoveries. One was that my only reading matter was a detective story and a dictionary. (You see, I had planned on writing until I felt sleepy.) The other was that my bed was directly over the wheels and that the wheels weren't perfectly round.

After your bed is made up on a European train you either have to sit on it or lie on it. Space is cramped. There's no such thing as club car or a smoking compartment. Anyway, my wheels had a queer, jiggly rhythm. Mp-mp-ok-mp-mp-ok-mp-mp-BUMP! I couldn't figure out the syncopation but I knew there was no chance of a normal sleep.

* * *

I FOUND I had read the detective story before and hadn't liked it. Which left me with a dictionary and my thoughts. The train bumped across the plain to Bologna. Then it climbed into the mountains and did some jerking in addition to the bumping.

I opened the dictionary at random and found "Salp." It means "a salpid, especially as an individual." Tried hard to figure it out and decided that the stock broker with the golden heart who had bought Allied Packers for me and sent me the bill was a salpid. I must have fallen asleep for a few hours, without undressing, because faint light leaked past the edges of the window curtains.

I heard someone knocking at the door of the countess' compartment and—

"Oh, porter, I haven't slept a wink all night. Could you get me a cup of coffee?"

Which made me sore. I'll bet she's a salpid, too. The flat wheels and the mountain grades derived no benefit from her sleeplessness, but if she had allowed my typewriter to keep her awake I might, at least, have tossed off an article on moonlight in Venice. She wouldn't have been any the worse and I would have felt much better.

I GOT a new makeup kit the other day and settled down to study my type. It made me feel pretty low at first. I couldn't seem to decide whether I ought to use brown or black mascara and it looked to me as if I had receding ears and a prominent face. The circular says they're both bad. Finally I got so provoked with myself I changed everything around. Put green eye shadow on the cheekbones and drew a line around it with eyebrow pencil, and rubbed in the shadows under my eyes with raspberry rouge. Then I sat back to get the effect. They say a new makeup changes your whole personality and it certainly seemed so. Old Mother Seitz was just coming in with a bottle of prune brandy for Elmira. She passed right out and Elmira hauled me over the coals for scaring people with my silly nonsense. I had it all washed off by the time Mother Seitz come to. She said she ain't seen such a face since the Cherokees come over the stockade.

MRS. ROBERT B. ALMY ON MILTON HORSE SHOW COMMITTEE

JUNIOR LEAGUER AS ARTIST

MISS BARBARA FROST is one of the busy Junior Leaguers who are building and painting the scenery for "The Secret Garden" the children's play which will be produced by the league at the Peabody Playhouse Saturday morning and afternoon. The play is being supervised by Miss Jane Bancroft. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

Henry Vaughan Heads List of Judges

AN ELABORATE HORSE show, which will attract entries from all over the State, will be inaugurated on Saturday, May 26, at Cunningham Park, East Milton, by the Massachusetts Forest and Park Association, of which John S. Ames is president.

Mr. Ames will serve as chairman of the horse show committee for the newest addition to the spring circuit which appeals especially to horse show devotees because the proceeds will be devoted to the building of the new State wide system of bridle trails. Officially the event is known as the Massachusetts Bridle Trails Horse Show but in equine circles the title has been abbreviated to Trails Show.

A more distinguished trio of judges would be hard to find than Henry G. Vaughan, president of the Masters of Foxhounds Association of America; Richard E. Danielson, master of Groton Hunt, and Harold Palmer, of Grosse Point, Michigan, and Manchester, who formerly showed Likely Lady, Peerless Princess, Treasure Box and many other noted champions.

Among the others who are closely identified with greater Boston equine activities who are serving on the committee are Mrs. Robert B. Almy, Mrs. William H. Danforth, F. Harold Toomay, George E. Bates, Calvin B. Farnsworth, George S. West, Allan J. Wilson, Oliver A. Johnson, Alnah Neyhart, Mrs. Florence E. Dibble, William Stuart Forbes, Waldron H. Rand, B. Nason Hamlin, George Lewis, Jr., Jesse B. Baxter, Francis Peabody, Samuel Parker, William E. Chamberlain, Mrs. E. Mainwright Browne, Mrs. J. Tucker Burr, Jr., Charles S. Bird, Jr., Harris A. Reynolds, Arthur H. Lovesy, Mrs. Sylvia Warren and William J. Davidson.

Twenty-four classes are on the prize list and entries will close on May 19.

Dance Planned by Cambridge Group

The Young People's Fellowship of Christ Church in Cambridge announces its annual spring informal dance to be held on Apr. 30 at the Parish House, 1 Garden st., Cambridge.

The members of the committee are Dorothy E. Henderson, chairman; Carolyn Wicker, Barbara Sweetser, Nancy Faxon, John J. Trefry and Donald Rainier.

Among those on the patroness list are Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Evarts, Mrs. Prescott Evarts, Mr. and Mrs. Walcott Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher Loring, Mr. and Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn and Mr. Cushing Toppan.

Society Notes

A LARGE REPRESENTATION from the 300 volunteers of the Family Welfare Society gathered at the Junior League Wednesday for their annual meeting. The speakers were Rev. M. Cushman and Miss Marjorie C. Warren, both active figures in the Emergency Relief Administration, and Malcolm Strong Nichols, general secretary of the society.

EN ROUTE FROM GREENSBORO, N. C., to their Beacon st. residence, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh O'Neil Hencken have stopped in New York for a few days and have registered at the St. Regis Hotel, where Mrs. Sheldon Wardwell of Brookline and Mr. and Mrs. George E. Stephenson of Marblehead are also guests . . . Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Crocker of Fitchburg are in New York at the moment.

Sports Lingo, or English as She Is Spoke on Diamond and Racetrack ↕ Glossary of Baseball and Turf Terms That Are Commonly Used

By AUSTEN LAKE

The scene is in the Braves' locker room, where the athletes are collecting their gear, honing pet bats, or being anointed with sweet smelling unguents by Trainer Jimmy Neary.

Austen Lake

"I picked up your banana stalk yesterday," says Frank Hogan mischievously, "And I don't even get a bleeder. All I do is a Baltimore chop on the pay ball and then a can of corn when the chunker pulls the string."

"You hind snatchers are all the same," rejoins Berger contemptuously. "A bunch of Fancy Dans and goal tenders. You were having a fishin' trip every visit. Why, I've been waiting for you to pour the pine since the poor farm and all you do is Sheeny Mikes and now and then a Chinese homer."

"So!" snorts Hogan, "What about that blue dart Saturday?"

"Well I ain't a leg hitter like you," says Hogan, "What with all these bases on stones and clinkers. You must have saw the barrels."

"No. 2's mostly, and now and then a nuthin' ball," explained Berger, "I was looking for that high, hard one all day so I could unbutton my shirt."

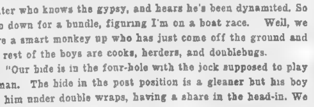
Baseball English as She is Spoke

Jibberish to the stranger but simple, elemental English to the ball player who uses the jargon of his trade in preference to common phrasing. There is no sporting dictionary to translate the ball player's lingo, but a literal translation of the above conversation may be gleaned from the following glossary: Banana stalk—bat with poor wood; Bleeder—Scratch single; Baltimore chop—batted ball that hits plate and bounces high in air; Pay ball—Pitch with count two strikes and no balls.

Can of corn—high lazy fly; Chunker—pitcher; Pulls the string—slow ball; Hind snatcher—catcher; Fancy Dan—poser; Goal tender—patient waiter at the plate; Fishing trip—swinger at bad balls; Visit—time at bat; Pour the pine—to hit a ball solidly; Poor farm—training trip; Sheeny Mike—looping single over infield; Chinese homer—strike out.

Blue dart—line drive; Blind Tom—umpire; Long strike—long foul: Leg hitter—fast runner who beats out infield hits; Bases on stones—grounder that caroms off a pebble; To see the barrels—to be lucky; No. 2—curve ball; Nothing ball—change of pace; high, hard one—fast pitch; Unbutton the shirt—take a full swing; Uncle Charley's got you—weak on curve pitching.



AND THEN—THERE'S THE LANGUAGE OF THE FLOWERS
"TH' MISSUS!"

The Track Man's Pretty Patois

Or my friends, a professional track swipe may approach you at Rockingham next June, borrow a match and begin as follows:

"Well, I just cracked down on a hot dog, a maiden who has been running the leaky roofs. The office comes from a wise punter who knows the gypsy, and hears he's been dynamited. So I go down for a bundle, figuring I'm on a boat race. Well, we have a smart monkey up who has just come off the ground and the rest of the boys are cooks, herders, and doublebugs.

"Our hide is in the four-hole with the jock supposed to play iceman. The hide in the post position is a gleaner but his boy has him under double wraps, having a share in the head-in. We got a good break at the gate, with our booter breezing into the chute. He's doin' a Bill Daly, see?

"Well, I see we're getting the works right off. And sure enough the favorite is lugging with plenty of daylight. Our cluck blows on the main oval and at the end is kissing the eight pole."

What your friend is trying to relate is a simple tale of being double-crossed on a supposedly fixed race. He is using simple, familiar terms that are accepted turf English. As thus:

Cracked down—placing a bet; Hot dog—doped horse; Maiden—Horse who has never won; Leaky roof circuit—rural tracks of Ohio and Kentucky; Office—tip; Punter—gambler; Gypsy—tricky, small-time owner; Dynamited—drugged; Bundle—large sum; Boat race—fixed race; Smart monkey—tricky jockey; Off the ground—recently released from suspension.

Cooks—bad jockey, too heavy or timid; Herder—jockey who helps another rider by crowding the contenders; Doublebug—novice rider; Hide—horse; Four hole—No. 4 at start; Iceman—jockey who holds back horse for belated spurt; Post position—nearest rail at start; Gleaner—money-earning horse; Double wraps—two turns on reins in jockey hands to restrain horse; Head-in—betting money; Break—start at the gate or barrier.

Booter—jockey; Breezing—running fast; Chute—part of track just after start; Bill Daly—horse starting for front at start of race; Lugging—hugging the rail; Plenty of daylight—leading margin; Cluck—worthless horse; Blows—drops back; Main oval—first turn; Kissing the eight pole—Last horse who is passing last furlong pole when leader reaches the wire.

There's Smoke in the Batters' Eyes Again as Hull Howitzer's Fire Ball Burns

Zip! and Bobby Brown blazes his hard one across in his great 1932 style. Brown, fit after a season's idleness, is waiting Bill McKechnie's call to arms. The Hull boy blinded N. L. hitters with his great speed in '32. A sore arm checked him last year. But he is back, and headed up the ladder of fame once more. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

Weather Jinx Halts Tribe in Opener With Giants

By Joe Cashman

But "Rain-in-the-Face" Terry led his New York Giants back to town today for the first time since that memorable series last fall which put 125,000 customers in the Wigwam in four days.

So neither Bill nor the Braves were surprised when rain came along to halt the opener of a three-game engagement.

Spring visits of the New Yorkers to Boston and inclement weather are synonomous. On their first trip here last season the Terrymen were snowed out of four tilts.

The postponement was the first of the current campaign for the Braves and couldn't have been more unpopular at the Wigwam. The Warriors have won four games in a row and like all clubs in a victory streak they hate to be thrown off stride by the elements.

TOUGH ON LADIES

And the ladies are wondering what the weather man has against them. Rain robbed them of a chance to look over the new Red Sox and Fenway Park last Friday and returns today to deprive them of seeing the Braves until late next month. And not another local game has been postponed this Spring.

Terry can't toss as much strength as he had hoped against the natives in the games tomorrow and Sunday, which will settle temporary ownership of second place. Roy 'Tarzan' Parmelee, scatter-armed right-hander who wrecked the Tribe's flag chances last season by winging Randy Moore, was operated on for appendicitis in New York yesterday.

BRANDT VS. HUBBELL

Three changes have been made in the New York lineup that swept to victory in five games over the Senators in the last world's series.

Travis Jackson, completely cured of the knee injury which opened the hall of fame for "Blondy" Ryan last season, is again the regular shortstop, the best in the business.

Lynn Blondy, still Lady Luck's favorite child, has moved over to second, spelling Hughie Critz, who was injured during spring training. "There's-No-Harm-In-Hughie" is reported fit to return to action, but Ryan hangs on. Proving the enemy pilot is plenty smart. The cocky, colorful Lynn boy has his weaknesses, but his mates can't get along without him and keep winning.

The third change is in centerfield. George Davis, who occupied the berth last season, was traded to the Cards for George Watkins, who holds down the spot against right-handed pitchers. 'Hank' Leiber, heavy-hitting rookie, faces southpaws.

ZACH TRIUMPHANT

While the Giants were handing the Phils their first of the year yesterday, a most surprising spectacles was on view at the Wigwam.

There was ancient Tom Zachary, the forgotten man of spring training, southpawing his way to a 2-0 triumph to give his mates a clean sweep of their three-game series with the Dodgers, and become the first Tribal pitcher to go nine innings this year.

Ol' Tom yielded only six hits and let just four Dodgers reach third. They filled the bases on him in the ninth but, cool as the east wind which swept across the field, he pulled himself out of the hole.

It was a sight for sore eyes. The Dodgers' optics weren't sore, and they didn't like it a little bit. They insisted that Thomas was placing more than his fingers on the ball. Umpire Stewart looked. So did Umpires Stark and Rigler. They agreed that Tom had plenty, but ruled that it was all legal.

Nothing less than perfect pitching could have saved the Warriors. They made only six bingles off Emil Leonard, Brooklyn's prize rookie.

Huddle--Toil and Trouble

Menace, Says Fuchs, Who Plans to Make Giants Stop It | Wholesale Huddling Promised at Tepee on Week-End

By Joe Cashman

New York's Giants are the world's champion ball players until proved otherwise, but as huddlers they'll discover in the current series at the Wigwam that they're rank amateurs compared to our Braves.

You've seen the Giants' huddle, or you've never seen the club in action. Every base hit off one of Bill Terry's pitchers is a signal for all four infielders to go rallying round the mound.

Top Man Terry comes over from first with a bit of advice. Blondy Ryan saunters in from second with a note of encouragement. Travis Jackson races in from short to add a pat on the back. Johnny Vergez never fails to arrive from third, though what he says or does is open to debate.

And Judge Fuchs doesn't like it a little bit. He finds Wigwam games last plenty long without any special dilly-dallying.

"I guess it must be against the law to get a hit against a Giants' pitcher," the writer heard the Tribal 'prexy' exclaim in the press coop at the Polo Grounds on the most recent Sabbath while he, the Judge, peered down on at least the fiftieth mound meeting of the series. "That sort of huddling is childish and has no place in baseball.

"The fans pay their money for baseball action, not to watch five able-bodied athletes playing Ring Around Rosy every other minute.

COME ON PLAY BALL!
WAIT'LL WE HEAR FROM OTT

There may have been some excuse for it when Rosy Ryan hung his hat at the Polo Grounds, but Rosy doesn't live there any more.

"I've voiced my objections to the practice and it had no effect. But I'm not licked yet.

"If the Giants don't grow up voluntarily, I'll instruct Bill McKechnie and the boys to turn back the clock and become children again.

"We'll have huddles what are huddles. Every mother's son on the field in a Tribal uniform will join in. The outfielders will join the catcher and infielders in a gathering at the mound after every Giant hit.

"We have the same rights as the Giants. We'll give them an overdose of their own medicine. Then the umpires will complain. That will stop the foolishness, or I'm greatly mistaken."

The Judge didn't know at the time that President John Heydler of the National League would be here when the champions arrived. The chief of the senior circuit attended the final game of the Brooklyn series.

With the Braves in a winning streak that is rapidly pulling them toward the roof, the Judge may be too elated to pay any attention to the Giants' actions. Or Bill Terry may decide against allowing his bluff to be called.

Harvard-Amherst Game Rained Out

Harvard's baseball game with Amherst, scheduled for Soldiers' Field this afternoon, was called off on account of rain. The contest was to mark renewal of diamond relations after a lapse of five years. It is hoped that a later date will be arranged.

Grid Injuries Avoidable, Friedman

New York, April 27 (INS)—Football injuries, in the opinion of Benny Friedman, C. C. N. Y.'s new gridiron mentor, are [illegible] avoidable. [illegible]

"Football can be taught so that the risk of injuries can be nullified. During the past month, in spring practice, I have been teaching my boys the axiom that the lower to the ground they get the less chance they have of being hurt.

"There are four fundamentals under that axiom. First, my players are taught to keep their feet spread to provide them with a firm base, so that they are harder to knock off their feet.

"Second, they must keep their rears down; that gives them a lower center of gravity, and makes them even harder to knock off their feet.

"Third, they must keep their backs straight, it gives them driving power. And fourth, I want them to keep their heads up, to see where they are going."

MAT RESULTS

Bangor, Me.—Ed Don George, North Java, N. Y., defeated Jim Kendrick, New York, in straight falls. Champion took first in 7:00 with flying head scissors, second with airplane whirl in 2:00. Boo Melow, Cambridge, and Harry Kruskamp, California, drew in 30 minutes.

Jack Kearns Broke Earned $1,000,000 With Jack Dempsey

By Jack Conway

Mr Boston

"I AM broke!"

JACK KEARNS who [illegible] $2,[illegible] with Jack Dempsey [illegible] down the middle [illegible] Vegas [illegible] white he [illegible] for $[illegible] [illegible] Mickey Walker [illegible] Walker has [illegible] for several [illegible]

Kearns in his day was the [illegible] manager of boxers [illegible] the world. [illegible] Tex Rickard and Jack Dempsey [illegible] the matter of [illegible] those [illegible] who were [illegible] in boxing.

It would be a [illegible] bare the [illegible] secret [illegible] run. Kearns was noted for the style of his clothes. He was the toast of the well dressed men along Broadway [illegible] Walker finished [illegible]

* * *

Made Dempsey Champ

KEARNS' genius as a manager made Dempsey heavyweight champion of the world. Dempsey had returned to the coast following a trip East when he met Kearns for the first [illegible] Dempsey was [illegible] to [illegible] New York and [illegible] to [illegible] him and [illegible] under his management.

Kearns soon found Dempsey could hit, and that he was as furious as a tiger when [illegible] He matched him with big slow fellows he could tag and it was not long before the entire country was talking about this terrific puncher out of the West.

Dempsey became the greatest box office [illegible] in the history of [illegible] boxing [illegible] He earned $1,2[illegible] [illegible] under Kearns' [illegible] and picked up $500,000 more in exhibitions, the movies and theatrical work.

* * *

Colorful Knockouts

THE TWO high spots in Dempsey's career during his association with Kearns were his knockouts of Georges Carpentier and Louis Firpo.

Tex Rickard astounded the sporting world when he guaranteed Dempsey $300,000 and Carpentier $200,000. This was the largest guarantee offered for [illegible] test up to that time. The show [illegible] [illegible] drew $1,[illegible]

[illegible]

The crack-up between Dempsey and Kearns occurred when the former champion married Estelle Taylor. Kearns opposed the marriage, and didn't mince words about the matter.

* * *

Started Fistic Feud

KEARNS MADE a bitter war on Dempsey before the latter [illegible] defense bout with Gene Tunney in Philadelphia. He annoyed the champion with [illegible] and caused him much mental unrest. He [illegible] contributed toward Dempsey's downfall. But he was on the outside of [illegible] record purse of $[illegible]

Kearns was also out of the Dempsey money when the former champion received $350,000 for his bout with Jack Sharkey, and $450,000 for his return engagement with Tunney in Chicago.

Kearns managed Mickey Walker into the [illegible] title. He has also managed several veteran minor boxers, but [illegible] his interest in the boxing game decreased when he broke with Dempsey.

I talked with Dempsey about Kearns recently.

"Doc and I were pals for years, and I consider him one of the greatest managers the boxing game has had," said Dempsey. "He made me champion. Perhaps some day we shall become friends again."

Dempsey and Kearns [illegible] speak for years. [illegible] Mickey Walker's [illegible] the night he was knocked [illegible] by Max Schmeling. Dempsey was introduced from the ring and [illegible] over to Walker's corner [illegible] Mickey [illegible] seized Kearns' [illegible] hand and left Doc speechless as he exclaimed:

"Hello, Doc. I'm wishing you luck."

Brouillard vs. Conrad

McGraw Monument

A monument to John Joseph McGraw will be erected at the Polo Grounds this Summer, it was announced today by the Giants management. The players themselves, especially those who played under McGraw, asked to take a financial part in the club's plans to honor the leader. The National League has also asked to contribute, but there will be no public subscription.

DEGLANE FAVORITE

Mat's Bad Man Goes on Air

"Well, here I am folks," says Ernie Dusek, "and all ready to ruin Henri DeGlane tonight in the Garden. See my left ear? Ray Steele did that. But I'm plenty tough. Henri will learn that tonight.

"How do you like those back muscles? They'll help me toss DeGlane around this evening. He'll wish he could be back in France. The Gamecock is in for a sad session. Come up and see me work on him.

"A left hook made Dempsey famous. My own left is pretty good, if I do say it. Maybe I'll soften up DeGlane with a few punches. I don't like to get rough, but when I have to I'm a wildcat." (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Marin Plestina, Chicago, vs. Cowboy Turner, Providence.
(First bout at 8:15 p. m.—Main bout at 10 p. m.)

By Jack Conway

Henri DeGlane and Ernie Dusek will be shooting for the wrestling heights when they clash in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at a Paul Bowser show at the Garden tonight.

The winner is almost certain to get a title match with Ed Don George.

DeGlane [illegible] a 10 to 8 favorite. This is due to the fact he is more experienced than Dusek, and has stood up in important mat contests.

Dusek is the latest of the wrestling sensations. He is 2[illegible] years old and has the fire and aggressiveness that topples champions from their thrones.

THREW ED GEORGE

Dusek will be seconded tonight by his brother, Rudy. The latter is a veteran wrestler, and is confident his brother will conquer DeGlane and then go on to win the championship from George. In addition to Ernie and Rudy there are two more wrestling Duseks, while two other brothers [illegible] sought [illegible] and [illegible] the ring.

Dusek's ability to keep [illegible] at a terrific [illegible] has been in the ring has been his greatest asset. This is what enabled him to [illegible] with the only fall [illegible] his recent [illegible] with George. Ernie then went on to win from Chief Strongbow and "Peacock" Jack Washburn.

DeGlane signed a contract for tonight's bout which gives Dusek the right to do anything he wishes in the matter of rough wrestling. DeGlane wants to prove he isn't afraid of tactics which have caused George so much concern.

RUDY DUSEK WRESTLES

DeGlane recently drew 1[illegible] fans to the Garden when opposed by George. If he licks Dusek tonight he will have plenty of backers [illegible] the event he [illegible] championship contest with Ed [illegible]

Joe Malcewicz and Nick Lutze will breeze into action in the semifinal. This is expected to be a [illegible] match.

HARVARD TRACK FAVORITE

Despite an [illegible] on the part of Eddie Farrell, Harvard's varsity track mentor, to allow his charges to run under wraps in this first outdoor meet of the season, the fifth annual Greater Boston Intercollegiates, the Crimson should have little trouble emerging from the test victorious for the fourth time over Boston College, Northeastern, M. I. T. and Tufts.

The contest will be among the [illegible] Northeastern and Tech for the [illegible] for the freshmen as well as varsity competition. Harvard will enjoy a wide edge.

This afternoon the competition [illegible] the 371 athletes through 2[illegible] events to the finals [illegible] the [illegible] meter low hurdles and the 2[illegible] metres dash, the semifinals of which will be held tomorrow, and the freshman field events, the pole vault, javelin throw, shot put, high jump, discus, hammer and broad jump, which were to be completed today.

Johnny Dean will attempt to repeat his 1933 victories in shot and discus, as will Johnny McManus of Boston College in the 100 metres, Al Halowell of Harvard in the 1600 metres, Johnny White of Harvard in the 800 metres, H. E. Fray of Northeastern in the high jump, Frank Schumann, of Harvard in the pole, and H. W. Huntington, of Harvard in the javelin.

Robbins to Give Firpo Title Shot

SOX SHIP TWO TO READING

Mark McComiskey of Lawrence and Arthur Graham, Somerville, have been released by the Boston Red Sox to the Reading, Pa., farm.

As Johnny Reder was sent to the same club recently the Sox are down to 24 men, only one more than they will be allowed to carry after May 15.

HARVARD MOURNS AS ED BROWN LOSES LAST GREAT RACE

By Bill Connell

Hyde Park high was to get away to a tardy start in its baseball season today, entertaining the Brighton nine at Readville playground. Hyde Park's late opening date is not likely to affect it much in the final tally. The team has one of the finest school diamond toilers for its captain in Outfielder Walter Bracken, and a fair supporting cast.

Right hander John Grimley on the hill and Larry Larson, catching, were ready to do the battery work for Hyde Park. The team opened its training early, and was fit for battle weeks ago. Only lack of competition seemed likely to hinder the Hyde Parkers.

Other games top rank today had Charlestown at Trade, Roxbury Memorial at Dorchester, Newton at Cambridge Latin, Stoneham at Winchester, Rindge at Brookline, Newburyport at Saugus, Marblehead at Danvers, South Boston at Jamaica Plain. In the Catholic League St. Mary's of Brookline at St. Charles, Waltham St. Mary's of Lynn at St. Clement's Somerville, Our Lady's at Mission St. Mary's of Waltham at Sacred Heart Newton, and Cathedral at Immaculate in Revere, were listed.

Coach Bill Healey of Wakefield high has had a group of 25 youngsters working in informal spring football drill. With practically all the line gone from last year's eleven, the spring building is necessary.

Wakefield grid work this spring has been staged for the benefit of the newcomers, as a majority of the seasoned players returning are included in either track or baseball. A final brief grid stretch after the baseball and track seasons conclude is planned by Coach Healey, to include the boys otherwise occupied this spring.

John Hall, football halfback and captain of the '34 Wakefield eleven is pitching for Homer Shetterberg's nine. End Alton Bennett catches. End Tom Walsh holds down first base. Tackles Eugene Fairbanks and Don Parker are trackmen. Only Quarterback Quido Confalone has worked diligently with the gridmen. He be a reliable signal caller in the fall.

Charley O'Hara of Boston College High, southpaw, faces a rough afternoon if he works against Malden tomorrow. The latter team is minus pitching strength but it has plenty of hitters, and will test the large Eaglet flinger. Who will toil only a brief spell unless the weather is very warm.

GAVE CRIMSON WIN OVER ELI IN 1928

By Walter Kiley

For almost 30 years, Edward J Brown has been closely associated with Harvard rowing. The success of Crimson crews on eastern waters has been in no small way directly been traceable to his fine influence. He died this morning at Ring Sanatarium after three months of ailing.

He will be buried from his home at 4 Nottinghill rd., Brighton, Monday morning at 8 15 o clock, with a solemn requiem mass being celebrated at St. Columbkille's Church, Market st. Brighton at 9 o clock.

Brown's death, caused by a general breakdown, ends the career of one of Harvard's finest athletic and sports figures. Alumni throughout the world will mourn his passing as they remember his fine upstanding figure, which kept time with every Crimson sweep and battled from the prow of his accompanying launch in every Harvard race.

SURVIVED BY WIFE

He would have been 60 years old on May 21. He leaves his wife the former Katherine [illegible]. They were married Aug 31 1918, just before the signing of the Armistice. There are no children.

At Boston Latin, Brown was guard and tackle on the football team. He entered Harvard with the class of 1896 but was forced to leave in January of 1894 because of the death of his father.

In 1909, he reentered Harvard receiving his A. B degree in 1911 and a Master of Education in 1925 He did not engage in sports at Cambridge.

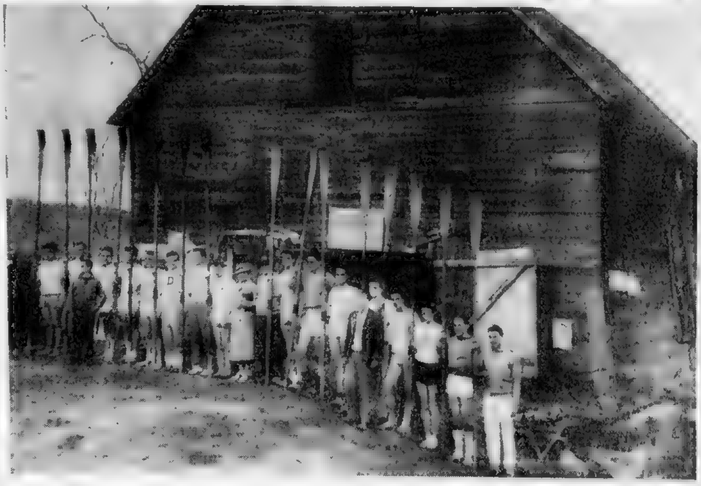
WIDE EXPERIENCE

From 1892 to 1904 Brown was coach of the Jeffries Boat Club in Boston, one of the better known club crews. In addition to being associated constantly with Harvard rowing, he coached the St Louis Mound City Rowing Club in the summers of 1913 and 1914, the Richmond Va., Boat Club in 1919 and 1920 and the Vedado Tennis Club crew of Havana, Cuba, in 1922 '23 and 24.

He was appointed head coach of Harvard's varsity crew in 1926 a post which he held until succeeded by Charlie Whiteside, present coach, in 1929. Brown's varsity eight won from Yale in 1927 and lost the two following seasons.

Since that time he has been the same familiar figure on the Charles as he directed class and house crews and the 150-pound boat.

In Humble Surroundings Dartmouth Rowing Is Reborn



A dilapidated ice house on the shores of Mascoma pond is now the Dartmouth Boat Club. For Dartmouth it is a shrine and a symbol, denoting the rebirth of rowing after 37 years. It houses the two shells constituting the Dartmouth navy. From such a humble beginning, the Big Green hopes to regain its place among the elite of the rowing world. Lined up in front of the "boat club" are members of the crew and Mrs. Ernest M. Hopkins, wife of the president of the college.

Rowing Returns to Hanover After Lapse of 57 Years

Hanover N H—For the first time since 1877, Dartmouth College resumes crew practice, which was inaugurated at Mascoma Pond, Enfield, ten miles from Hanover.

Dartmouth starts out anew with a navy without cost. Two eight oared shells were presented to them, an old dilapidated icehouse turned over to them by residents of Enfield who also built a float for them and they have the free services of a crew coach who is James Smith, of the Union Boat Club of Boston.

POOR PITCHING BEATS SOX

The final game in Washington was ruined by poor pitching on the part of Bob Weiland and Henry Johnson. The Senators hopped on Weiland for six hits and five runs in the first inning, and they got to Johnson for three more in the [illegible] which sent them off to [illegible] run lead.

The Sox got back five runs in the third on as many hits, an error by Cecil Travis and a base on balls. Then Jack Russell who has pitched in or warmed up for almost every game the Senators have played this season relieved the faltering Monte Weaver.

Leonard Fine Looking Pitching Prospect

By Joe Cashman

John Heydler, president of the National League, is visiting Boston on his annual spring tour of inspection around the circuit. He has been in St. Louis, Chicago, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and New York and reports that everywhere he has found both business and interest in baseball on the uptrend.

The Dodgers can't take it. Burned up over their inability to solve the portside slants of Ol Tom Zachary they resorted to the motheaten claim that the veteran was 'doctoring' the ball. With President Heydler in a front box, the "umps" paid more than ordinary attention to these protests, but careful examination revealed nothing illegal about the apples Tom was tossing.

Emil Leonard, the young Belgian in the Brooklyn box, shapes up as the sweetest kid pitcher who's happened along in ages. His knuckle ball is a beauty. He also has speed, a good curve and a baffling change of pace. And he was as cool as Old Zach.

Al Lopez, classy little Flatbush receiver might have handled Leonard better. Whitney's game-winning double came on a count of two strikes and a ball and was a groove pitch. A funny ball to call for when the batter is in the hole. Or how are the relations between Spain and Belgium these days?

Thursday was a day of miracles. In addition to Tom Zachary's shutout, The Phillies won their first game and the Cubs suffered their first defeat.

A GUY NAMED ALLEN, WHO WASN'T GOOD ENOUGH TO PLAY FOR THE GIANTS, GAVE THE QUAKERS A 3 TO 2 VICTORY OVER THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONS WITH A HOME RUN. FIDGETY PHIL COLLINS ALSO HELPED. HOLDING THE NEW YORKERS TO FIVE HITS.

It was a home run, too, that wrecked the Cubs' seven-game win streak. Jim Bottomley stepped up with a mate on in the ninth to knock the ball out of Wrigley Field and give the Reds a 5 to 4 edge. "Chuck" Klein had previously given the Cubs a lead with his fourth circuit drive of the season.

NATIONAL LEAGUE BALL LIVELIER, DECLARES JIMMY FOXX

SLUGGER SEES SCRAMBLE FOR FLAG

By Associated Press

New York, April 26. If you don't care to worry along through the closing days of September adding up Jimmie Foxx's home runs and wondering if he'll break Babe Ruth's record of 60 in one season here's a short cut.

"If I have 18 by then," says the burly belter of the Athletics, "I'm on my way. I'll make it. If I'm under 18, well . . ."

Jimmie shrugs his wide shoulders and grins cheerfully. He's only 27 years old with years of swatting still ahead of him. He hit 58 in 1932, two shy of the Babe's great mark. It would seem as though adding two homers to that output shouldn't be too tough a task for a fellow who was that close once. But it's far from simple.

BREAKS COUNT

"You have to have every break in luck," Jimmie explains. "You've got to be in there swinging every game. I always get away to a slow start and have to make up ground late in the season. One minor injury will ruin everything."

Jimmie has a suspicion, too, that the American League ball this season isn't as fast as the National League whippet. It seems that they're still using balls in the American League that were manufactured last season, and they don't seem to vanish with the celerity of the National League balls that were rushed into manufacture when uniformity was decided upon last winter.

He has an idea, too, that the 1934 pennant race in the American League will wind up in a mad scramble.

"The Yanks look good, sure, but I don't think they're as strong as last year with those kids Rolfe and Heffner in the infield. And the Senators, why they might not even finish in the first division. They look like they're still suffering a hangover from the licking the Giants gave them.

"Their fire and pep are gone. Their pitchers are all bogging down. Cleveland, Detroit and the Red Sox look great and if we get pitching—it's anybody's race."

BETTER RUTH

Jimmy make[illegible] about the strength of the Yanks this season. Babe Ruth [illegible] ball hero along with every [illegible] looks better to him than he [illegible] years.

"He's in there like a colt," grinned Jimmie admiringly. "At 41 he's still fighting harder than a lot of rookies. This is the Babe's life.

"He rolled one down to me the other day for an out and he was plenty sore.

"What's the matter, Babe?" I asked him. "You aren't hitting."

"He looked at me for a second like he wanted to bite.

"Aw nuts," he said.

Hayes' Rise to Stardom Talk of A. L. Circuit

International News Service.

New York, April 27. Nine years ago Frank Hayes was a catcher at Pennington (N. J.) Prep., wondering if he could make the school team.

Today Frank Hayes is filling Mickey Cochrane's shoes as first string catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics. He's handling Connie Mack's young pitchers in fine fashion, tossing out the Ben Chapmans of the American League and winning ball games with his hits off such famous pitchers as Gomez, [illegible] and Whitehill. Only yesterday his double off Lane in the ninth gave the A's a victory over the Yankees.

MERRIWELL A PIKER

Frank Merriwell was a piker compared to Frank Hayes, for the [illegible] story is stranger than fiction. In fact, any magazine editor would turn it down for being too improbable and far-fetched.

Reams have been written on minor leaguers who made the big time. Sports writers have grown hysterical over collegians like Frank Frisch and positively maudlin over sandlotters like George [illegible]. What then are they going to say about a school boy who makes the big league grade overnight?

Hayes wasn't even much as a school boy catcher. He didn't burn up the scholastic circuit. He was just another unknown. There were [illegible] like him around the country.

HAS WON JOB

The [illegible] of an old [illegible] of Connie Mack's stopped [illegible] the aged leader of the A's to give Hayes a trial. Mack liked and saw [illegible] to enthuse him. [illegible] that was last year. Today Connie says nobody is going to get Hayes out of there. He's won the job.

Bill Dickey, the Yankees' great catcher, calls Hayes one of the future stars of the game. "He's a little green yet," said Dickey today, "but he's smart and he's learning so fast you can see him do it. He's a natural. Nothing can stop him."

3200 ATHLETES COMPETE IN PENN GAMES

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 27. Thirty-two hundred athletes from 500 institutions start feet flying, bodies soaring above the ground and missiles flying through the air today in the athletic kaleidoscope that makes up the Penn relays.

School boy unknowns and some of the nation's most famous track stars will race the same cinder path in the two-day program.

The field of entrants is the largest in the 40 years of the University of Pennsylvania's relay carnival. Eighty-seven events are listed.

CUNNINGHAM HERE TODAY

Among those scheduled to arrive today is Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas "Cyclone," who will try to reassert his supremacy over Gene Venzke on the Penn flier's own track in a special mile race Saturday.

Holding top interest among today's events is the spring medley relay championship, with Princeton's Bill Bonthron and Indiana's Chuck Hornbostel clashing in the final leg of 880 yards. Princeton is the present wearer of the crown.

The Penn Quakers are defending their laurels in the classic mile relay, but they face crack competition from seven, possibly eight, foes. A last minute announcement disclosed that Yale and Cornell have withdrawn, but still in the running are Indiana, New York University, Navy, Manhattan, Pitt, Columbia, Lafayette and maybe Ohio State.

LAYDEN A FAVORITE

The 440-yard and half-mile relay events are to be run in heats because of the numerous entries with four quarters entering each final. Twenty-five years are listed in the 440 and seventeen in the 80.

PARMELEE LOSS BLOW TO GIANTS

By Associated Press

New York, April 27. The world champion Giants' pitching big four had become a threesome today as Leroy (Tarzan) Parmelee, fast ball right hander, began a recovery from an emergency operation for acute appendicitis.

Stricken ill suddenly at Philadelphia a few hours before he was slated to pitch against the Phillies, Parmelee was brought hurriedly to New York and underwent an operation for removal of his appendix late yesterday afternoon.

Although Parmelee's case was acute, Dr. Harry Kelley, club physician of the Giants, said the pitcher had stood the operation well and barring unforeseen complications should make a rapid recovery. He will not be able to rejoin the club, however, until mid-Summer, if then.

The loss of the young right-hander comes as a major blow to the Giants in their campaign for another National League pennant. Carl Hubbell, Hal Schumacher and Fred Fitzsimmons now will have to shoulder most of the pitching burden while Manager Bill Terry attempts to develop another starting hurler from among the [illegible] William Watson Clark, [illegible] Salveson, Joe Bowman and [illegible] Smith.

Browne, Nichols to Row Tech '37

Browne and Nichols fine crew is the favorite to defeat Al Dunning's Tech '37 eight tomorrow in a regatta on the Charles. The freshman and schoolboy 150-pound shells meet in the other race.

Handicapped by the illness of Stroke Lawrence, who only recently returned to the shell, the Dunnings charges are hardly expected to row the crack cantab crew on even terms.

Burns Signs With Portland Club

Portland, Ore., April 27 (INS)—George Burns, ousted manager of the Seattle baseball team by the Pacific Coast League last week today became a member of the Portland Ducks as a player.

Rumors that Burns, former big league star, was signed as a possible successor to Manager Walter McCredie were denied by Thomas L. Turner, owner.

BILL BARRETT MALDEN TWI MANAGER

By Bob Ahearn

Bill Barrett, former White and Red Sox player, has been appointed manager of the Malden entry in the Boston Twilight League, according to an announcement made by Owner George Atkinson. Barrett succeeds Bill Huunefield, one time Chicago White Sox star.

North Cambridge Red Sox were voted a membership in the league, replacing the Dilboy Club nine of East Cambridge. Johnny [illegible] Keyes, hockey coach at Boston College, will have charge of the new entry.

Keyes managed the Red Sox through 16 straight victories last year. The team will play its home games at Rindge(?) St. Playground, North Cambridge.

SEASON OPENS MAY 13

It was voted to have the league season open May 13. Sites for the opening games include Wayland, Lowell, C. M. A. C., Dilboy Field and Newton. The schedule will be announced at the next meeting, which is set for May 7 at the Rosebud Garden, Boston.

Jack Huxtable, former South Boston Twi ace, has been signed by Malden City Club. He will play second base.

An exhibition [illegible] between First National Stores and Shaw Club, both members of the Suburban circuit, is scheduled for the Shaw playground, Somerville, Sunday afternoon. Mayor Hagan will toss out the first ball.

Much interest is being shown in the game scheduled at Ringer Field, Allston, Sunday afternoon. The Allston A. A. meets the town team. Both teams will present strong line-ups.

Arlington Rosebuds, managed by Backy O'Neil, has an outfield composed of Carl Sumner, former Red Sox player, Johnny Murphy, Cape Cod League player of note, and Norman Woolford of Nichols Junior College.

Clubs interested in entering the Inter-Suburban League should get in touch with Larry Nadeau, 101 Montgomery st., North Cambridge. Those already signed up include Ingalls A. C., Norwood Tigers, Somerville A. A., Columbia A. C. and Dedham A. A.

The P. J. Foley Club will be represented by a strong semi-pro nine. Team managers desiring games communicate with John Manning, 19 Haverford st., Jamaica Plain.

Joe Wright, Scull Champ, Near Death

Toronto, April 27 (INS)—Joe Wright, Jr., internationally known oarsman and winner of the diamond sculls in 1928, is fighting for his life in a local hospital as a result of serious complications arising from an infected right hand, it was learned today.

Wright has suffered internal hemorrhages. The infection, according to physicians, was caused by an ingrown hair. Wright is the husband of Martha Norelius, former United States Olympic swimmer.

Leafs, Wings Split $500 Ice Purse

Vancouver, B. C., April 27 (AP).—The Toronto Maple Leafs wound up their barnstorming tour of Western Canada with a 7 to 5 win over the Detroit Red Wings here last night. An overtime period was played to decide the winner of a $500 purse for the winner of the local three-game series. This went scoreless so the teams will split the prize.

SHUCCO MEETS KNIGHT MAY 11

The Garden has been idle as far as ring shows are concerned, waiting for a first class match to revive the sport at the North Station arena.

In the Shucco-Knight match, Matchmaker Billy Ames believes he has arranged a battle which will draw many customers. Shucco is one of the most popular ringmen to work in recent years in Boston.

BOXING RESULTS

Providence—Lou Ambers, 134, Herkimer, N. Y., stopped Billy Lynch, 137, Providence. Nine rounds, technical knockout (Cut over eye). Ambers had won four rounds, Lynch 3, with one even.

St. Louis—Dick Shikat, 222, Philadelphia, threw Everett Marshall, 216, La Junta, Colo., 44.41.

DICKENS BARED OWN ROMANCE IN "DAVID COPPERFIELD"

FAMED STORY PARALLEL OF DICKENS OWN LIFE

Letters of Famous Novelist Provide Intimate Light on Romance With Maria Beadnell; Read Them

What Has Gone Before

Intimate light on the romance of Charles Dickens and Maria Beadnell, as provided in the novelist's self-revelations in his world-famous novel "David Copperfield," were presented in yesterday's instalment. Further evidence of the parallel between the real life of Dickens and Maria and the fictional life of David and Dora in "David Copperfield" are contained in the accompanying instalment.

By H. H. HARPER

TWENTY years before, Dickens and Maria had agreed to do the same, but Mr. Beadnell had discovered it and she was sent away to Paris.

And later when David found it necessary to go to Dora with the story of his straightened circumstances there is another picture of Maria Beadnell's manner in the following:

"Dora came to the drawing room door to meet me; and Jip came scrambling out tumbling over his own growls under the impression that I was a Bandit, and we all three went in as happy and loving as could be. I soon carried desolation into the bosom of our joys—not that I meant to do it, but that I was so full of the subject—by asking Dora without the smallest preparation if she could love a beggar?

"My pretty little startled Dora! Her only association with the word was a yellow face and a nightcap, or a pair of crutches, or a wooden leg, or a dog with a decanter-stand in his mouth or something of that kind; and she stared at me with the most delightful wonder.

"'How can you ask me anything so foolish?' pouted Dora. 'Love a beggar!'

"'Dora, my own dearest!' said I, 'I am a beggar!'

"'How can you be such a silly thing?' replied Dora, slapping my hand, 'as to sit there, telling such stories? I'll make Jip bite you.'

"Her childish way was the most delicious way in the world to me, but it was necessary to be explicit, and I solemnly repeated: 'Dora, my own life, I am your ruined David!'

"'I declare I'll make Jip bite you!' said Dora, shaking her curls, 'if you are so ridiculous.'

"But I looked so serious that Dora left off shaking her curls and laid her trembling little hand upon my shoulder, and at first looked scared and anxious, then began to cry. That was dreadful. I fell upon my knees before the sofa, caressing her and imploring her not to rend my heart; but for some time poor little Dora did nothing but exclaim, Oh dear! Oh dear! And oh, she was so frightened! And where was Julia Mills! And oh, take her to Julia Mills, and go away, please!—until I was almost beside myself.

"At last, after an agony of supplication and protestation, I got Dora to look at me with a horrified expression of face, which I gradually soothed until it was only loving, and her soft, pretty cheek was lying against mine.

"Then I told her, with my arms clasped around her, how I loved her so dearly and so dearly; how I felt it right to offer to release her from her engagement because I was now poor; how I never could bear it, or recover it, if I lost her! How I had no fears of poverty if she had none, my arm being nerved and my heart inspired by her; how I was already working with a courage such as none but lovers knew; how I had begun to be practical, and look into the future; how a crust well earned was far better than a feast inherited; and much more to the same purpose which I delivered in a burst of passionate eloquence quite surprising to myself, though I had been thinking about it day and night, ever since my aunt had astonished me.

"'Is your heart mine still, dear Dora?' said I, for I knew by her clinging to me that it was.

"'Oh yes!' cried Dora. 'Oh yes, it's all yours. Oh don't be dreadful!'

"'I dreadful!—To Dora!'"

These little scenes have charmed millions of readers of David Copperfield and no doubt will continue to do so until the end of time. They are the sort of touch of sweet humanity that is not wholly imaginary. Even an inventive genius like Dickens could record them only from memory. They are the surprises of love, never foreseen and luckily never forgotten. His portrait of Dora is rich with them, and undoubtedly Maria gave him every one.

Beggar Spurned by Love

The dream of Maria Beadnell had haunted him all through the most productive period of his life. Indeed, it was an almost constant obsession. This is plainly shown in the characters of Copperfield, Pip and others.

For instance, when Estella tells Pip that he will soon put her out of his thoughts he exclaims:

"Out of my thoughts! You are part of my existence, part of myself. You have been in every line I have ever read, since I first came here, a rough country boy whose poor heart you wounded even then. You have been in every prospect I have ever seen since—on the river, on the sails of the ships, on the marshes, on the clouds, in the light, in the darkness, in the wind, in the woods, in the sea, in the street. You have been the embodiment of every graceful fancy that my mind has ever become acquainted with.

"The stones of which the strongest London buildings are made are not more real, or more impossible to be displaced by your hands, than your presence and influence have been to me, there and everywhere, and will be.

"Estella, to the last hour of my life, you cannot choose but remain part of my character, part of the little good in me, part of the evil. But, in this separation I associate you only with the good, and I will faithfully hold you to that always, for you must have done me far more good than harm, let me feel now what sharp distress I may. God bless you, God forgive you! . . . All done, all gone! So much was done and gone, that when I went out at the gate, the light of day seemed of a darker color than when I went in."

If these portrayals of Dickens' love for Maria delighted the reading public, what effect must they have had on the woman who saw herself playing the little heroine in number after number as they appeared, recognizing episodes in her own love affair with this man whose name was on every tongue.

Married to a prosaic business man and living a drab, colorless existence, what must have been her feelings, hidden in the background, obscure and unknown, viewing those enchanting pictures of herself as the outstanding sweetheart of the century, loved by Pip, Headstone, David Copperfield and others in all of whom she easily recognized her old discarded lover.

The wonder is that she could restrain herself from proclaiming to all the world, "I—I am Dora, and Charles Dickens really loved me just as he has written!"

The letters of 1833 must have become infinitely more precious as the story of David Copperfield was unfolding in its monthly parts; and it is not unreasonable to suppose that she had some difficulty in stifling the impulse to write this zealous lover and beg him to forgive her former cruelties. Lacking the courage to do this she very likely persuaded her father to make an effort to re-establish communications with him, as will appear from the letter next following.

Dickens, in obedience to his picturesque inspiration of "splendid strolling," had formed a company of famous writers and artists into an amateur theatrical troupe, playing with pomp and circumstance in London and some of the larger cities for a worthy charity.

Word came that this galaxy of great names, on a glorious tour, was coming to play in the city near where Maria's father was living in retirement, and he, who had rejected and ejected Dickens from his home, wrote inviting him to spend a night with him in remembrance of old acquaintance. In answer Dickens sent a cordial note declining on the grounds of time but inviting Mr. Beadnell to visit the Music Hall.

And if the facts could be known they would probably show that Maria herself was then at her father's home, awaiting Dickens' answer with no less eagerness and excitement than he had felt when waiting for her answer to his last love message nineteen years before. There is nothing to show that Mr. Beadnell accepted the invitation to call at the Music Hall, which lends color to the hint that he wrote to Dickens at the behest of Maria and not upon his own initiative.

Remembering that Maria is "Dora" and knowing something of her whimsical nature from the graphic pen portrait in David Copperfield it is a little pathetic to realize that she was trying in a childish way to be a good wife and mother, yet clinging to a golden memory and finding a little solace in a carefully preserved page whereon her "Doady" had written so many years ago, "Nothing will ever afford me more real delight than to hear that you, the object of my first and last love are happy."

Even though this wish were unfulfilled, she must have felt a bit proud to know that these words were written to herself alone by a pen that had become the most famous in all the contemporary world.

Three more years rolled by and as she was approaching what is said to be woman's "dangerous age," Cupid rekindled her imagination with retrospective fancies and hopeful aspirations. Unable to stand the strain any longer she was emboldened to break the long silence and attempt to open an avenue of approach to her old sweetheart.

SCHOOL CLOSE PROTESTED

Mayor Mansfield has received a letter from Miss Lucy G. Bushey president of the Long Island Nurses' Alumni Association, protesting against the closing of the Long Island training school. A delegation of alumni will also seek an appointment with the mayor to record a protest.

The letter points out the excellent records of the many graduates of the 38-year-old training school and speaks of the unusual value of nurses trained there, where almost every kind of disease is encountered.

Her letter also declares that the situation should be a challenge to the administration to improve conditions rather than leave the care of patients in the hospital to the hands of untrained individuals.

SHINING COIFFURE IN A JIFFY -:- MARRIAGE IS LONELINESS INSURANCE

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

(CHAPTER 23)

MARY'S QUESTION careened around the room, while I held my breath for fear that Noel's diplomacy would fail in his answer to her fiery demand.

But I need not have feared for Noel. The whole future of his life was in danger of being wrecked and he was in no mood to balk at quibbling, or even at a direct falsehood, in order to keep it intact.

"Of course I thought of it myself," he stormed with a manner calculated to convince even so skeptical a girl as his lovely fiancee. "I thought of it the second you said my father wanted you to go to Paris."

Mary threw back her head and laughed.

"You ought to be a good poker player," she said. "The masterly way you concealed that thought was like nobody's business. You were congratulating and God speeding me all over the lot."

Her face was tipped back from his, her lovely, mutinous mouth mocking him. Forgetting both of them and held to my couch by my twisted ankle I felt like the occupant of a box seat at a play, and wondered if Noel would lose his inhibited shyness and answer her in the only possible way.

He did. I thrilled, as I might to a third act climax, when with a hoarse little exclamation he pulled her face up to his before she could dodge, and kissed her so thoroughly that she had neither breath nor speech. And after the first fraction of a second's resistance, I do not think they missed either speech or breath.

But woman-like she was the first to remember me. She twisted her lips free with a [illegible] little ejaculation.

"Heavens, Noel! Auntie Madge! What will she think?"

I gave an irrepressible little laugh.

"I think, Mary, that you'd better haul down your red flag of battle and run up the white one of surrender."

Mary capitulates in the face of Noel's new determination—and Madge sees success for her plan for an early wedding.

If I ever saw a determined man in one whom it will be dangerous to cross—it's the one who is facing you. Be warned, my dear!

"And don't mind me! I tried to get away once, and neither of you knew that I was here. If you'll help me into my bedroom you may have this room as a battle ground. Only, Mary, take my advice and don't battle. This young man is in deadly earnest."

They were both at my side as I finished, Noel a bit shamefaced, but determined, Mary with starry eyes, which held, however, a trace of mockery. I saw that she had not yet finished with the hapless young man, even though it was plain to me, if not to him, that his battle was won.

"Oh, Auntie Madge; I'm sorry!" she said contritely, and Noel echoed her apology. "But you're not going anywhere else. If you can stand what we have already pulled [illegible] you will probably [illegible] sit through the rest. I [illegible] want to ask Noel a few questions for the [illegible]"

THE THIRD DEGREE

She laughed up at him, but though he smiled back at her, I don't think it is in his makeup to refuse her a smile—his face held stubborn lines.

"I don't care how many questions you ask me if you first promise to marry me," he said, and I hardly knew Noel's usually musical and gentle voice. There was a distinct [illegible] in it.

But Mary took a few dancing steps away from him. "I promise you that [illegible]," she said airily, and with feminine intuition I saw that there was some admission she would wring from him, and that she did not intend to yield utterly to him until she had it.

Noel took a determined step toward her but I, knowing Mary's untamed spirit and her perverseness, put out a restraining hand. He had success within his grasp, but, in my opinion, he was in danger of losing everything he had gained.

"I'd like to hear the questions, Noel," I said, and [illegible] took all responsibility from Mary, and, as nothing else could, prevented the [illegible] from doing anything save listen.

"There are not many of them," Mary said. "I believe you, of course, when you say Miss Underwood wasn't responsible for your springing this rush marriage proposition, but you can't make me believe she didn't ask you into her apartment when you left here, and [illegible] that got you all het up and bothered."

Noel hesitated, and I guessed that it was no conscious scruple between truth and falsehood that was holding him back. He was simply determining the expediency of telling Mary about Lillian's counsel. At last he threw up his head defiantly.

"Yes, she did ask me to come into her apartment," he said, "but she didn't say a word about marriage. She just wanted to show me something in the morning paper that she thought I ought to know."

Mary's eyes sparkled with mischief, and something more elusive.

"And what was the nice little piece in the paper, darling?" she queried mockingly. "It must have been something pretty fierce to make you dash in here with this bold Lochinvar stuff."

Noel took a quick step toward her and seized her arms in a clasp that was almost savage. This time I made no restraining move, said no precautionary word. He was at the end of his patience, and I guessed that Mary knew it as well as I did.

No Need to Refuse Enticing Engagement When Hair Needs Shampooing

By Carol Ames

HOW OFTEN WE HEAR that familiar wail: "Oh, it's going to be a lovely party—and just look at my hair! I should have shampooed it days ago." For it's the irony of fate that just when the shampoo has been neglected and the hair looks dull and unattractive the telephone is sure to bring a bid to go places and meet new people. The moral is—keep your hair fit.

"Easier said than done," you say, and I realize that taking time out for a shampoo doesn't always seem possible. Then, too, there's the question of expense. When the hair is very blonde or snowy white, the situation becomes even more difficult, for these shades, to be lovely as they should be, demand endless hair grooming and shampooing [illegible] once or twice a week.

We can find excuses enough for [illegible], but the fact remains that regular hair cleansing is necessary to hair beauty. [illegible]

So start [illegible] massage the scalp a bit every night and shampoo the hair regularly. Dry heads do well with a bit of liquid vaseline (just the tiniest bit) occasionally rubbed on the scalp before the nightly brushing. Oily scalps are improved if a generous amount of [illegible] (your favorite tonic with [illegible], for instance) is well worked in before the shampoo.

And now I've discovered something grand for those between-shampoo times when your hair needs a quick cleansing. It is a dry-cleaning process that freshens the hair in just a few minutes. No, it's not a powder, as you may have guessed, but a pleasant smelling liquid that you rub on the scalp and comb through the hair, then finish by fluffing the hair with your fingers for a few seconds.

By the time you've attended to your face and dress and are ready to go, your hair is dry—and your wave is there even perkier than before. As you comb your hair the wave falls beautifully into place.

You'll find this new shampoo just about the handiest item in your beauty kit. When invitations come at the last moment, you can have fresh, shining hair in as little time as it takes you to clean your face!

Telephone to Carol Ames, LIBerty 4000, if you wish to know the name of this new "dry" shampoo and where it can be bought in Boston. If you prefer writing for this information, send along a stamped self-addressed envelope with your inquiry.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Round Shoulders

Question: Because of the nature of my work, which requires that I sit all day, I have acquired round shoulders and sort of a hump on my chest. Can you give me exercises to correct same?—W. A. C., Arlington.

Answer: To correct round shoulders, the first step is to cultivate a proper posture. I know it's difficult when you sit all day, but try to stand and sit correctly, with chest out, head up and shoulders in natural line.

Practice the following exercise. Raise arms, shoulder high, elbows bent. Clasp the fingers of both hands, one within the other, in a firm grasp. Move the arms from right to left. In trying to pull the hands apart there should be a strong pull of the muscles between the shoulder blades. Head and shoulders should be held erect throughout the exercise.

Forehead Lines

Question: Will you please tell me of a home treatment for eye and forehead wrinkles?—M. M., Milton.

Answer: To correct eye and forehead lines, cleanse face with cream and remove with tissues. Apply nourishing cream with a circular movement from bridge of nose outward under the eyes. [illegible] not to pull or stretch the delicate tissues. Then, with the two middle fingers of each hand, pat gently around the eyes. To massage forehead use tips of two fingers beginning at center of forehead just over nose, using both hands, work with gentle rotary movements to temples. Repeat until entire forehead has been covered, continuing movement several minutes. Then place palms of hands at eyebrows and massage forehead with definite lifting movement.

Shapely Lips

Question: Before I tell you about my problem, Miss Ames, I should like to tell you how thoroughly enjoyable and helpful your column is, and to thank you for all your helpful suggestions toward acquiring charm.

Now my problem is a pair of most unshapely lips that cause me no end of embarrassment and self consciousness. What do you advise me to do to overcome this beauty fault?—S. K., Everett.

Answer: The best thing you can do is to forget your mouth [illegible] and quit worrying about it. No doubt you are over-conscious of it. Apply lip rouge sparingly, and don't choose too striking a shade as that would only call attention to your mouth.

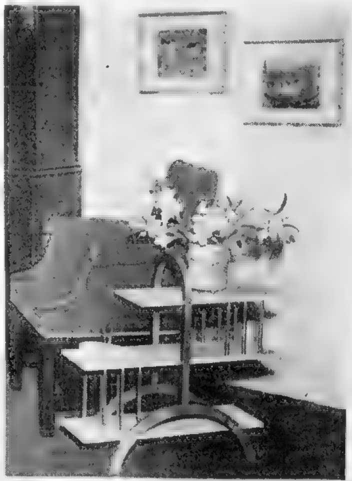
Clear Skin

Question: I am over weight. My complexion is bad, and my hands are rough. This is not caused by neglect, as I try to give myself some beauty attention each day. I would appreciate your help.—Mrs. A. B. J., Newton Centre.

Answer: The condition that causes your bad complexion may [illegible]. Be careful of your diet. Eat plenty of fruits, vegetables and salads. Don't forget to drink a great deal of water, as that is most beneficial.

Be sure to cleanse your skin thoroughly and use a pure skin food and astringent. If your skin is dry, use skin food daily. If it is oily, alternate a greaseless cold cream with soap and water. Use an astringent after your cold cream.

ARTISTIC CORNER GROUPING



"CHINESE MODERN" is the bone white and antique gold leaf trimmed table set beside a decorative, comfortable chair of Woodrose cut frise, studded with white nail heads. A porcelain vase, and two Degas copies on the wall, carry out a muted green, rose, white and gold scheme. These pieces are from a Boston store. Clean Hair Fluffs and Curls Bewitchingly

FORTUNATELY, the necessity to shampoo hair every other day or so, for appearance before the camera, is part of the actress' burden, not the average girl's. Toby Wing's shining hair needs constant attention. And it does give a pointed lesson—only hair that is fresh and clean looks its best. For busy people who might find themselves in need of a shampoo, and practically no time at all to do it in, Carol Ames gives an important hint in today's beauty column.

Masterful Play Justifies This Six Club Over-Bid

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Benedict Jarmel of New York is the hero of today's story. He sat South in a recent Duplicate match when the following hand came up:

North, Dealer.

North: ♠Q7 ♥K854 ♦AKJ42 ♣Q5
West: ♠432 ♥J109763 ♦965 ♣J
East: ♠J1095 ♥Q ♦Q83 ♣K9743
South: ♠AK86 ♥A2 ♦107 ♣A10862

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♣ (?)	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	6 ♣ (?)	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

When his partner opened the bidding with one diamond, Mr. Jarmel, holding three Aces and a King, plus a reasonably good club suit, was justified in feeling that there was probably a Slam in the hand and while in the later rounds of the bidding his partner's responses should have been rather discouraging, I think he was justified in this final slight over-bid of six clubs. At any rate his masterful play made up for any possible error in the bidding.

The Knave of hearts was the Opening lead, upon which Dummy played the King, East dropped the Queen and South played small. The Queen of clubs was led from Dummy and allowed to ride. When the Knave fell from the West hand, Mr. Jarmel could see that his only chance of fulfilling his contract lay in couping East's trumps. Toward this end he led the Ace and King of diamonds and ruffed a small diamond in his own hand.

A spade was now led to Dummy's Queen and a spade returned, after which he cashed his Ace of spades and ruffed the last spade in the Dummy. Another diamond was now led from Dummy, which East was forced to ruff and Mr. Jarmel over-ruffed. It will be noted that at this point the East hand was down to three trumps and the Declarer's hand down to the Ace and 10 of trumps and the Ace of hearts.

The play of this latter card now forced East into the lead and Mr. Jarmel's trump tenace won the last two tricks. A good example of excellent technique combined with perfect timing.

Tomorrow's Hand

South, Dealer.

North: ♠A943 ♥AK8 ♦K8 ♣A832
West: ♠QJ1065 ♥— ♦763 ♣Q10654
East: ♠K82 ♥Q1097654 ♦— ♣KJ7
South: ♠7 ♥J32 ♦AQJ109542 ♣9

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

Summer is icumen in and all that sort of thing, but don't blame the sap in me if I wax enthusiastic about the arresting beauty of countless young women I see strolling down Tremont st. and through the Public Garden these days.

I'll be sixty-eight my next birthday, but I'd willingly skip my seventieth birthday and the rest of my scheduled existence if my pleasure in just looking at a pretty girl terminated.

And that's where you come in, Pandora. My wife—and a fine figure of a woman she is—gets ornery every time I take a look at a pretty ankle or a doe-like pair of eyes. This has been going on—well, as a matter of fact, ever since we've been married, and we celebrate our fiftieth anniversary come Michaelmas. Now, I keep telling her there's no harm in admiring beauty in any form. The other day she snapped back at me, why didn't I go in for lassoing butterflies or peeking into the private life of a sweet-william if I was so all-fired interested in beauty, or wasn't that up to my standard of measurements?

Now, what can you do with a woman like that? Every once in a while she gets all worked up about why don't I give her an occasional compliment. Doesn't that seem a little ridiculous for a woman of her age, Pandora?

FREDERICK X. W.

DEAR FREDERICK X. W.

Not atall, not atall! When a woman stops wanting compliments she's as dead to the world as a century plant in an off-year. And speaking of skipping, if you'd skip a brace of those ankles and doe-like glances on one of these saunters through the tulips of Boston's Public Garden and give your wife a little concentrated and flattering attention, it might be a pleasant sensation for both of yu. On your mark, one-two-three, go, Romeo.

Silver Raincoat Becoming As an Evening Gown

If you're saving up for a rainy day, a good investment is one of the new raincoats for spring, which proves that there may be some reason for singing in the rain.

The era of decorative raincoats, which began last year with the epidemic of white rubberized silk trench coats and matching hats, reaches a new high this season with carefully tailored coats of silver fabric, rainproofed and practical, but as becoming as your favorite evening gown.

The recently discovered process of waterproofing practically anything, from chiffon to taffeta, has raised the spirits of the raincoats manufacturers no end, and rainy days henceforth should provide a much more heartening spectacle of old, in the era of collegiate yellow slickers, for instance.

Crisp plaid waterproof taffeta raincoats follow on the heels of the new popularity of taffeta for spring and summer wear, and some of the decorative styles shown would do credit to the wearer rain or shine.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

"'REGULAR' PAIN? MY DEAR, THAT DATES YOU. LET ME TELL YOU WHAT TO DO!"

"Regular" pain is out. So is even discomfort at this time. That's a fact, and it's just too bad for the girl who hasn't learned how she can keep her dates, and keep comfortable.

Just watch the calendar. Before your time, take a Midol tablet and drink a glass of water, and you may escape the expected pain entirely. If not, a second tablet should relieve it in seven to ten minutes. That is how rapidly this remedy works, and Midol relieves even those who have always had a difficult time. Relief is such that two tablets should see you through the worst day. Yet they contain no narcotic, nothing injurious. They're as harmless as the aspirin you take for an ordinary headache. But don't be fooled by ordinary pain tablets offered as a specific for such suffering! Midol is a special medicine, for this special purpose. Your druggist has it on the counter—or just ask for Midol.

Famous Writer Wonders Why Women Give Up 'Coming Home to Someone'

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

A LONG-TERM insurance policy against loneliness—provided the premium payments of good humor, good health and loyal interest in each other's activities are regularly paid—ought to be handed to each bride and groom, along with their marriage certificate.

More than any other relationship, marriage, properly managed, guarantees companionship on the often dusty and sometimes dangerous highway of life. In the course of nature, we outlive our parents. Our children are birds of passage, flying away from the home nest—only a cruel parental selfishness clips their wings. But a husband, a wife, is comrade and sharer of our destiny—somebody always at hand to do things with, to tell things to. That's a definition of marriage not only as it can be, but as it often is.

LOST HUSBAND

Just the other day, the definition was driven home to us by Mrs. Nolan—which is not, but might have been her name, for the Celtic wild rose blooms in her cheeks and her eyes are as blue as the bay we two stood watching while we waited for the boat. The eyes blue as salt water were also wet with it, for out of our beach's freemasonry in joy and sorrow she spoke:

I've lost my husband since I saw you last season. Forty-five years we were together—forty-five years! And I always hoped I'd go first.

'SAPS'

'Yes, that's what I call them to their faces. What do they know about living with one man for almost 50 years? They tell me:

'Mother, you've got us.'

'And I tell them:

'Having children is like a cat having kittens. When they're little you love them and take care of them. When they're grown they go their way. That's only nature. But it's your man that stays with you; your man that's your life.' Forty-five years! Oh, I don't know what I'm going to do without him, going on alone."

BENEFITS OF POLICY

And yet—even if her insurance policy against loneliness lapses now, for 45 years she has enjoyed its benefits. We thought of what another Irishwoman, Kathleen Norris, once said to us. This most beloved novelist and Charles G. Norris, her novelist-husband, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary this year, on April 20th.

"What I can't understand," declared Mrs. Norris, "is how these brilliant, independent women who refuse to marry can be happy, never having any one to come home to! It seems to me that they miss the very sweetness of life!"

And—like the average insurance policy—that which marriage offers against loneliness permits the holders to enjoy the benefits even while they are making the payments. The more congeniality and comradeship they put into life together the more they take out. Besides, there's always the extra dividend of love!

Hostess Gifts Need Not Be Expensive

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I have been invited to visit at the home of a boy friend by the mother and the boy friend, of course. I would like to know whether it is necessary to make two gestures of appreciation to the mother—one upon arriving there with candy or flowers, and one upon arriving home again—in the form of some gift besides the bread-and-butter letter? If all this is not necessary, what do you advise as to the proper way to go about this rather expensive proposition?

2. When in a restaurant, what is the proper way to sit? Does one sit opposite one's escort at a square table and next to him at a round table?

1. While these pleasant gestures aren't exactly "necessary" they show a fine sense of appreciation and generous impulses. And they needn't at all become an "expensive proposition," for, no matter how high-placed are our ideas about sending expensive gifts, it is still the spirit that shines forth from the gift that makes it of value to the recipient. You probably know of some special kind of candy that is excellent, or some kind of other sweets—take a small box of these. Or a box of daffodils or some other gay spring flowers. Or a group of the latest magazines. This is the sort of present that is appropriate for us to take with us when we go to visit.

When we return from the visit we may send a more personal gift, for in the meantime we have had the opportunity of observing the tastes of the hostess or of the family, and so we can make a more definite choice. Then we know of certain books that they will enjoy. Or some detail that will be welcomed in the home, a set of cigarette box and ash receivers; a breakfast or luncheon or tea set of cloth and napkins; (you can buy charming sets for a very small amount); a novelty box of some kind, very effective looking and convenient; a desk or photograph portfolio; a photograph frame; a vase; a small folding desk blotter. Another excellent gift, much featured now and much appreciated by the hostess and her family, is the gift of a carefully-chosen collection of small jars of various kinds of jellies and jams, or a group of delicious kinds of hors d'oeuvres.

2—All other things being equal, it is well for the man to have the woman sit on his right. But even this rule gives place to convenience. That is, if there is one seat that is more convenient for seeing the entertainment, the woman naturally is given this seat. Also there may be a question of a serving-table, or of a serving-entrance.

Spring Blouses

And the minds of the stylists are divided between feminine frills and masculine tailored severity, as usual.

There is a happy medium, however, which makes its bow to femininity in the choice of a fabric, and clings to the tailored cut. Witness the crisp new taffeta blouses, with the simplest of round collars, buttons down the front and a businesslike air which still has its frivolous overtones.

The same is true of the tailored shirts of sheer pastel crepes, pale pinks, light blues, smoky salmons and sunny yellows. In style they are uncompromisingly severe, with tailored masculine collars, pleated fronts, long sleeves and cuff links. But the fabric and color add the important feminine touch.

NEWEST LASTEX SWIM SUIT IS HIGHLY DECORATIVE AND MAKES FOR LISSOM LINES

Beach Garb to Be Smarter Than Ever

By Dorothy Roe

The elastic bathing suit has solved that problem with neatness and dispatch.

Lastex jerseys, silks and even crinkled linens mold the season's new swim suits to every variation of the figure, and bursting seams and belts that won't meet are a thing of the past.

NEW NOTE FOR SUMMER

The nice thing about it is that the Lastex doesn't show. It's knitted into smart tweed jerseys, satins, simulated hand-knitted fabrics, and practically anything you can mention. Aside from the fact that the fabric stretches, the presence of elastic is undetectable.

A NUMEROLOGY FAN

If you see a girl with a large black number on her white bathing suit, don't mistake her for a marathon swimmer, or a feminine jockey. She's just a numerology fan, and the embroidered number on her suit is probably her lucky digit, decided by the stars and a crystal ball.

The bib top and halter neck are still favorite features of the bathing suit picture—and there is also the single strap, to be adjusted at will.

For Silk or Gingham

By MARIAN MARTIN

Cross bars on organdie—gingham or silk—it is all the same to this pattern. It takes them beautifully. But that does not end its possibilities, not by any means! There is the whole galaxy of flower prints and after that you have the plain fabrics from which to choose! And you will like it in any of these materials and so will the rest of the world! It is young and becoming, smart and the nearest thing to nothing when it comes to making, that you ever tackled. In other words—it has every good point.

Pattern 9989 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 2[illegible] yards 36 inch fabric and [illegible] yard contrasting.

Morning Glory Linen Frock

A LINEN PRINT like this will likely trot coolly around town when the sun at last decides to shine its best, and it is the sort of tub and sunfast thing that is equally at home in the suburbs, seashore or mountains. Irish handkerchief linen—you know what a pleasure it is to do one up, even yourself—with hand fagotting on the dainty jabot and on the cuffs of the puffed sleeves, and a kindly feeling toward the budget. All Dog Bites Are Dangerous

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

Hydrophobia, or rabies, as it is more commonly called, is primarily a disease of dogs. It is transmitted to human beings by the bite of an infected dog. It is a tragic ailment and unless energetic measures are taken it may result in a very serious disease.

A recent investigation shows that since the depression more homeless dogs than ever are wandering around the country. This is discouraging news and really is of great concern to the health of every community. Homeless dogs are a menace to unsuspecting children and adults. No one will deny that the danger of hydrophobia is increased by this unfortunate circumstance.

Strange and stray dogs should be collected and given necessary food, shelter and humane care. Diseased dogs must be isolated and kept away from other pets and children. Of course this is a harsh and often difficult measure, but accidents are all too frequent and the danger cannot be overstated.

Every dog bite should be suspected as having in it the menace of hydrophobia. The suspected dog should not be killed. Notify the health authorities who will take care of the dog, keeping it under observation to determine whether or not it is a victim of rabies.

In the meantime the bite should be immediately cauterized. Do not be satisfied by simply applying an antiseptic. No antiseptic is sufficiently strong and benefit is only derived by complete cauterization. This can be accomplished only by the careful application of fuming nitric acid.

If the dog shows suspicious symptoms or if special tests reveal the presence of rabies, the Pasteur treatment for the victim should be started at once. This method is the only means of preventing the development of hydrophobia. It has saved thousands and thousands of lives.

Unfortunately many persons neglect dog bites, regarding them as unimportant. They treat the wound with mild antiseptics and neglect the proper attention. When this has occurred the Pasteur treatment may be ineffective and the victim succumbs to an ailment that could have been prevented.

Hydrophobia has been known to mankind for many centuries. But it is only within the present century that man has been able successfully to combat the disease. Its occurrence today can in most instances be traced to unnecessary negligence and carelessness. It is hoped that more careful attention will be paid to this disease so that it may be eradicated eventually.

Chickie's Daughter

By Elenore Meherin

CHAPTER 68

Pippin read over Bill's letter. Her own aching heart made her gentle. She wanted to weep.

She sat there musing: wondering about this mystifying thing called love; this subtle, exciting, overwhelming emotion drawing you so ruthlessly, so defenselessly to another.

She reached for paper and began to write. She liked Bill's breezy dash and the warm, impetuous sweetness of words whispered against her cheek. Yet now she could well wish he were not returning.

She felt lost and in such doubt. It was seven days since she wrote her last letter to Kevin, a long letter which she purposely made interesting and merry. Tucked away toward the end was this paragraph:

"Not a word from the wandering youth tonight or last night! Seven days since a line has come from you. I've answered your letters three to one and more . . . but this, my gallant gentleman, is the very last unless you take time this very moment to scrawl three words across a blank white page. Three words it is or your little old sweetheart will take all promises back; she'll tread the primrose path and scribble no more to the unanswering void."

TIME FOR AN ANSWER

Yet now there were these rumors. It might be true that Hildegarde had come 3000 miles to claim him. Perhaps she had some claim.

"Pippin, wire me at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, on Thursday. I want to know you're saving the date and glad to do it, come heaven or high waters. If you receive this letter in time, and I'm sure you will, don't wire but send a good kind letter saying you love me in a gentle, yearning way as of yore. Say it and send it. Dear Pippin, you will!"

THINKS OF LOVE

Bill wrote this and felt happy. He had all Pippin's letters in his wallet. He read them over and thought with high, laughing confidence: She does not know how much she cares!

He took the ring he had bought, stuck it with her letters in his pocket. She loved him or she would!

He bade his mother good-bye. She followed him about with warm, anxious eyes. She was a strong woman yet with a fragile look. Her hair was fluffy but the blonde of it all silvered.

"You will go the southern route, Bill? I hear it is more safe."

"I've crossed the continent twice and no mishap. Don't be worried for me!"

"But you're so impatient now. You will not fly at night?"

"No, I won't. I mean to get there, mother."

Ellen Lodge smiled and held to her son's hand. She said, wistfully: "You are very much in love?"

THE SMALL LAD

"I like her picture and things you've told. Give me time to arrive for the wedding, won't you?"

"Ample time for that. I am not sure she'll have me."

Tears swam to her eyes. She kissed him and said happily: "It is not possible that you can lose."

Thursday night Bill arrived at the Ambassador. He found a letter from Pippin:

"You accuse me of writing sweet letters just for the joy of playing with words. Is that what makes your own pen so swift and warm? I would be a strange, cold person if I were not glad to see you. I am not strange nor very cold, I fear. So I'll welcome you and joyfully. It will be gay to wing through blue, sunny skies again and, yes, I'll take the ring you bring me for remembrance.

"You ask if I still would say I'd not mind being lost in Mars with only you for company. I'm feeling in a very melancholy mood tonight, Bill. Perhaps it's from over-study. But I'd rather welcome being lost. I'd like it far, far away. Mars would do and you would be sweet company!"

He read the letter and wished he were in San Francisco now.

BUMPY BUT PASSABLE

He had ridden down a storm in the lower Rockies over New Mexico. A little wind wouldn't daunt either him or his plane.

He reached the pass where the Sierra Nevada, marching the length of California on the east, meet the Coast Range traversing the west.

It voted that Doc Wirt took off his winter flannels too soon. It voted that Doc's brain trust had no brains. It voted that everything is good and there is no evil.

However, the voting was three to two. Which is practically unanimous if you never went to school.

A score of three to two is a close contest. Next time Doc might win if he wears smoked glasses in the sun field.

He has some consolation. The House Committee didn't blank him.

STRICT BILL WOULD AFFECT LISTINGS

Small Corporations Seen as Sure to Withdrew

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The thought of a strict stock exchange bill does not strike terror in the hearts of all observers of financial affairs. Some will tell you without hesitation that the passage of a strict exchange control bill will result in the greatest boom ever seen. Sounds absolutely hair-brained; until one examines the thought process behind such a statement. Let's begin with the first probable result, which would undoubtedly be the withdrawal from listing of the equities of many small corporations. The remaining issues are likely to prove totally inadequate in supplying even semi-investment demands. Any consequent increase in absorption, against an already diminished supply, will tend to create a stock exchange boom of sensational breadth.

The new "Zephyr" high-speed Diesel-electric train, built for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, has one feature that has not been stressed as much as the radical construction of the train itself. The C. B. & Q., under the leadership of President Ralph Budd, had thoughts of passenger comfort as well as speed in mind when they provided to have the train air-conditioned throughout. The York Ice Machinery Co., which supplied the complete air conditioning system, had to comply with rather stringent specifications stipulating that the total weight of the system should not exceed 3000 pounds. Yet they accomplished this and at the same time designed a unit that constantly circulates a volume of fresh filtered air.

The sudden selling wave which engulfed the stock list, shook the confidence of many of the less hardy traders. For our part it represented a shakeout, and nothing more than that. By WALL ST. SPECTATOR

The market [illegible] recently worn [illegible] the last [illegible] Support [illegible] appeared at the [illegible] and [illegible] The [illegible] considered a con[illegible] of the rail wage question.

Observers consider the present decline as an adjustment to the change in the inflation situation. This has been going on in commodities as well as stocks . . . The probabilities of a huge credit inflation later on are being ignored for the time being in view of the cold water thrown by the administration on the silver drive.

SOCONY VACUUM OUTLOOK GOOD

Officials refused to comment on reports that net would be around 70 cents a share, but said the showing would be good. In 1932 Socony earned only 17 cents a share . . The company as well as Standard of New Jersey was helped by the depreciation of the dollar since last year, which brought a corresponding markup in its big holdings abroad . . . The Jersey Standard report is expected about May 13.

The rails, if any group, should be the ones to yank the market out of its despondency.

The carriers won't feel the added wage costs for two months, and the balance of the year won't bring much of a new burden . Next year will be different, but lots can happen in the meantime, including a real rise in business and traffic.

We hear of buying in national supply on information from banking quarters . . . Some informed people believe the $2 dividend will be the low for Consolidated Gas. At current levels the yield is nearly 6 per cent.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE MIXED

Stocks were mixed in late trading on the Boston Exchange today. Rail issues were moderately im[illegible] with Atchison, New Haven and Pennsylvania showing fractional gains. Boston & Albany jumped over a point.

Boston Elevated showed a point gain. Edison Electric was down over a point but pared the loss in [illegible]. New England Telephone was steady around its previous closing level. American Telephone was a shade easier.

American Pneumatic first preferred dropped 2 points and Brown & Co. preferred was down a point. Torrington, United Shoe and Nash Motors were down slightly. Eastern M[illegible] St. Railway [illegible]

Grains Lower in Chicago Trading

Chicago, April 27 (AP)—Grains [illegible] Dow[illegible] of [illegible] had a [illegible] effect as to cereals, despite persistent dearth of moisture in spring wheat territory.

Opening unchanged to ⅜ off July 75⅝-¾, wheat afterward held near the initial limits. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ lower and subsequently declined all around.

Silver Rallies in New York Trading

New York April 27 (AP) — The silver market rallied today after its severe reactions of the past week.

SILVER PLANS HURT BY AIMS OF BACKERS

Price Lifting Policy of Nation Not Ended, Says Haney

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics New York University

New York, April 27—The moves of the silver crowd have been given a black eye by showing what most of us knew—namely, that it is backed and guided in part by interests which may be selfish.

Some people are therefore inclined to think that maybe the administration will turn to sound money. Therefore, they wonder if we are in for renewed deflation in business and the stock market.

To me, it seems that there is little reason to anticipate such a revolution in the administration's monetary ideas. I do not think that inflation is dead, nor that the price-lifting policy is over.

I doubt if even the "experimental approach" alibi will be considered strong enough to allow the administration to get away with an abandonment of the gold manipulation "policy," and the promise to raise prices in one way or another.

The administration evidently has some sentimental inhibitions concerning "greenbacks" and "free silver." It shows considerable obstinacy in resisting pressure to print "notes" and "silver certificates." But it has shown no hesitancy in expanding government credit, nor in tinkering with the monetary standard. It has not shied away from talk of "controlled inflation."

The probable defeat of silver inflation, therefore, need have little bearing on the development of inflation. A government which can call such paper as is now given to the Federal Reserve banks "gold certificates," and which can take our gold, write up a paper profit on it, and then dole it out to farmers, is not averse to currency appreciation.

In fact the present government seems to believe in "soft" credit currency, the "commodity dollar," and a "managed currency." It does not believe a definite standard money unit is necessary.

So if you want inflation, I can see no need of worrying. The chaces are good. We already have some, and more is likely to follow. As business slows up and farm prices recede, the probability will grow.

Public Offering of Boston Bonds

Carloadings Are 10,616 Higher Than in Previous Week

By Associated Press.

Washington, April 27—The American Railway Association announced today that loadings of revenue freight for the week ended April 21 were 589,453 cars, an increase of 10,616 above the preceding week, 92,941 cars above 1933 and 26,926 above 1932.

Grain and grain products were 26,286 cars, a decrease of 930 cars below the preceding week, 8568 below 1933 and 5000 below 1932. In the Western districts grain and grain products loaded totaled 16,567, a decrease of 6113 below 1933.

Loadings for the year to date were 9,271,825 cars as compared with 7,736,050 in 1933 and 9,010,766 in 1932.

DOLLAR GAINS IN LONDON

By Associated Press

Foreign exchange markets were dull and showed little change today.

In London the dollar gained ¼ of a cent, closing at 5.13½ to the pound sterling, and in New York the British currency advanced ⅛ of a cent in later trading to $5.13⅞.

In Paris the dollar closed slightly lower at an equivalent of 6.64 cent to the franc, while in New York francs declined .01 of a cent in later dealings to 6.64 cents.

MONSANTO HAS $674,177 NET

St. Louis, April 27—Net profits of the Monsanto Chemical Company for the first quarter of 1934 were $674,177, equivalent to $1.56 a share on the 432,000 shares outstanding, compared with $[illegible]06,320 or 69.5 cents a share for the corresponding quarter last year.

In his report, Edgar M Queeny, president, states that Monsanto's sales and profit levels of the last six months of 1933 were maintained during the first quarter of this year. During the quarter $371,362 was invested in plant expansion and improvement. Working capital was increased by $509,066.

The Board of Directors this week voted a quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share, including shares comprising the 100 per cent stock distribution effective April 30. The dividend is payable June 15 to stockholders of record May 25.

RAIL HEAD IS OWN SALESMAN ON TRAIN

By B. C. FORBES

An alert business man who is always on the lookout for new ideas, new things, new methods, visited the Burlington's new streamlined train in New York. He was much impressed.

Col. B. C. Forbes

After being shown all its novel features he reached the end car, where he found a man doing a very effective "selling job." Impressed by his personality, his persuasiveness, his ability, my friend wanted to learn his identity.

Ralph Budd who climbed to the presidency of the Great Northern at an age when most railroaders are filling subordinate position, has always had an eye to business, always been enthusiastic to make converts to his road

Learning, years ago, that I was on one of his trains, he met me at St. Paul, rushed me into an auto, showed me the home of James J. Hill and other landmarks of St. Paul and Minneapolis and whisked me to the latter station in time to rejoin the train.

Business success, as I see it, is going to depend more and more hereafter upon superlative salesmanship.

One reason why Henry Ford has dropped to third place in the automobile world which he once toweringly dominated, is that he could not be convinced by associate that it was necessary, after evolving the right kind of product, to devote tremendous energy to selling it. "If the car won't sell itself, it doesn't deserve to sell," was his attitude.

How different a policy General Motors has followed. And Chrysler. The first time I met Bryon C. Foy, Chrysler's son-in-law, who is a veritable sales dynamo, Chryslersler admonished me: "button up your pockets, or this young man will sell you a car right here in my office."

In my humble opinion, we are about to witness as thoroughgoing a transformation in railroading as the motion picture industry has undergone in jumping from silence to sound.

STOCK PRICES ARE FIRM AT CLOSING

New York, April 27—The stock market made feeble attempts to stage a rally today but met with only meagre success as staders continued nervous and stuck to the side lines.

The commodity markets gave an exhibition of independent strength, but this was ignored by the stock market in the same manner as was the slump a week ago.

Wheat, corn and the other grains rebounded more than a cent a bushel above yesterday's close. Cotton ran up about $1 a bale, and silver rallied nearly half a cent an ounce in spirited trading.

A drible of liquidation continued apparent in Consolidated Gas through the session and such recovery as was made from time to time appeared due more to short covering than to any long buying. Other utility shares were quiet and generally steady.

A 10,000 car rise in loadings proved disappointing to traders in the railroad shares, where only fractional recoveries were scored. The "street" had been looking for a gain of 15,000 to 20,000 cars during the week.

Motor stocks including General Motors, Chrysler, Hudson and Auburn gave an uninspiring account of themselves to finish around their previous close. The auto accessory shares gave a similar performance.

Standard Oil of California after getting down to a new low for the year yesterday received some support today and recovered fractionally. Other oil shares, however, were quiet and sluggish.

United States Steel, American Can, and Bethlehem were quiet and generally steady. Industrial stocks as a whole were quiet.

The farm shares failed to score any gains in the face of the gains in wheat, merchandising stocks were quiet and heavy notably Macy.

Alcohols, chemicals, celanese and specialty stocks were sluggish and moved along with the rest of the list.

Stocks showed firming tendencies near the end of the first hour. Trend at the start of the session was mixed. National Steel was around a point higher, reflecting good earnings report issued today. American Bank Note was a point above its last closing price.

United Carbon, Howe Sound, New York Central, Atchison, Columbian Carbon and Eastman were at moderately higher levels. American Commercial Alcohol advanced a point. American Shipbuilding was better than a point higher.

Anaconda Wire & Cable, Bangor & Arostook, Coca-Cola, Industrial Rayon, North Western Telephone, Penney and Pere Marquette were down fractions to a point or more. California Packing and Johns-Manville were up over a point.

Stocks were mixed in the third hour with narrow price changes ruling. Snider Packing and California Packing were up over a point, American Commercial Alcohol and American Bank Note were a point or more higher. American Smelting and American Agricultural Chemical were at moderately improved levels.

Texas Gulf Sulphur, U. S. Smelting, Commercial Credit and American Can were at fractionally lower levels. Coca-Cola dropped more than a point. Howe Sound was around 2 points higher.

Metal shares improved in the fourth hour giving the list a firm tone. Howe Sound gained almost 2 points. Cerro De Pasco, American Metal, McIntyre Porcupine and American Smelting were fractions to over a point higher.

Du Pont, Atlantic Coast Line and Pillsbury Flour were up a point or more. Auburn and Devoe & Reynolds showed moderate improvement. U. S. Steel was a shade higher.

Fisk Rubber Corp. Income $120,287

Fisk Rubber Corporation reports for the quarter ended March 31, 1934, gross sales (less returns and allowances of $2,156,198, and net income) after all charges, including taxes, of $120,287. After deducting a quarter's dividend on the 37,836 shares of $6 preferred outstanding at the end of 1933, the balance of $63,533 is equal to 15 cents a share on 423,405 shares of common outstanding Dec. 31, 1933.

THE THIN MAN

Wynant's Son Explains His Arrest

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

Soon to appear on the screen as a thrilling motion picture made by Cosmopolitan Productions for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Get out!" Guild snarled, and Flint got out. Guild groaned from deep down in his big body. "That mugg gets me. Big Shorty Dolan's mob." He shook his head hopelessly and addressed Gilbert: "Well, son?"

Gilbert said: "I know I shouldn't've done it."

"That's a fair start," Guild said genially. His face was becoming normal again. "We all make mistakes. Pull yourself up a chair and let's see what we can do about getting you out of the soup. Want anything for that eye?"

"No, thank you, it's quite all right." Gilbert moved a chair two or three inches towards Guild and sat down.

"Did that bum smack you just to be doing something?"

"No, no, it was my fault. I—I did resist."

"Oh, well," Guild said, "nobody likes to be arrested, I guess. Now what's the trouble?"

"You're in as bad a hole as Lieutenant Guild wants to put you," I told him. "You'll make it easy for yourself by making it easy for him."

Guild nodded earnestly. "And that's a fact." He settled himself comfortably in his chair and asked, in a friendly tone: "Where'd you get the key?"

"My father sent it to me in his letter." He took a white envelope from his pocket and gave it to Guild.

I went around behind Guild and looked at the envelope over his shoulder. The address was typewritten, Mr. Gilbert Wynant, The Courtland, and there was no postage stamp stuck on it.

"When'd you get it?" I asked.

"It was at the desk when I got in last night, around 10 o'clock. I didn't ask the clerk how long it had been there, but I don't suppose it was there when I went out with you, or they'd have given it to me."

Inside the envelope were two sheets of paper covered with the familiar unskillful typewriting. Guild and I read together.

Dear Gilbert:

If all these years have gone by without my having communicated with you, it is only because your mother wished it so and if now I break this silence with a request for your assistance it is because only great need could make me go against your mother's wishes. Also you are a man now and I feel that you yourself are the one to decide whether or not we should go on being strangers or whether we should act in accordance with our ties of blood. That I am in an embarrassing situation now in connection with Julia Wolf's so-called murder I think you know and I trust that you still have remaining enough affection for me to at least hope that I am in all ways guiltless of any complicity therein, which is indeed the case. I turn to you now for help in demonstrating my innocence once and for all to the police and to the world with every confidence that even could I not count on your affection for me I nevertheless could count on your natural desire to do anything within your power to keep unblemished the name that is yours and your sister's as well as your Father's. I turn to you also because while I have a lawyer who is able and who believes in my innocence and who is leaving no stone unturned to prove it and have hopes of engaging Mr. Nick Charles to assist him I cannot ask either of them to undertake what is after all a patently illegal act nor do I know anybody else except you that I dare confide in. What I wish you to do is this, tomorrow go to Julia Wolf's apartment at 411 East 54th st. to which the enclosed key will admit you and between the pages of a book called The Grand Manner you will find a certain paper or statement which you are to read and destroy immediately. You are to be sure you destroy it completely leaving not so much as an ash and when you have read it you will know why this must be done and will understand why I have entrusted this task to you. In the event that something should develop to make a change in our plans advisable I will call you on the telephone late tonight. If you do not hear from me I will telephone you tomorrow evening to learn if you have carried out my instructions and to make arrangements for a meeting. I have every confidence that you will realize the tremendous responsibility I am placing on your shoulders and that my confidence is not misplaced.

Affectionately,
Your Father.

Guild waited for me to say something. I waited for him. After a little of that he asked Gilbert: "And did he phone?"

"No, sir."

"How do you know?" I asked. "Didn't you tell the operator not to put any calls through?"

"I—yes, I did. I was afraid you'd find out who it was if he called up while you were there, but he'd've left some kind of message with the operator, I think, and he didn't."

"Then you haven't been seeing him?"

"No."

"No."

"You were lying to Dorothy?"

He lowered his head and nodded at the floor. "I was—it was—I suppose it was jealousy really." He looked up at me now and his face was pink. "You see, Dorry used to look up at me and think I knew more than anybody else about almost everything and—you know—she'd come to me if there was anything she wanted to know and she always did what I told her, and then, when she got to seeing you, it was different. She looked up to you and respected you more— She naturally would, I mean, she'd've been silly if she hadn't, because there's no comparison, of course, but I—I suppose I was jealous and resented—well, not exactly resented it, because I looked up to you too—but I wanted to do something to impress her again—show off, I guess you'd call it—and when I got that letter I pretended I'd been seeing my father and he'd told me who committed those murders, so she'd think I knew things even you didn't." He stopped, out of breath, and wiped his face with a handkerchief.

I outwaited Guild again until presently he said: "Well, I guess there ain't been a great deal of harm done, sonny, if you're sure you ain't doing harm by holding back some other things we ought to know."

Father Beaten by 'Mob' of Children

Kansas City, Kas., April 27—Roy Tuttle, father of 11 children, told police he was beaten by seven of his offspring and that he plans to sue the city for damages, under the state mob law.

Five or more persons constitute a mob, according to Kansas statutes, and Tuttle told Police Captain Eli Dahlin he was anxious to find out more about it. Children in the Tuttle home range from an infant to 21 years.

McLeod Bill Can Pass If People Demand It

CONSTANT, unremitting pressure by the people of the United States will assure the passage of the McLeod bank bill at Washington.

The McLeod bill, as you know, would require the Government to pay depositors in closed banks of the Federal Reserve System in full for their frozen deposits.

It is a measure of ordinary justice to these depositors, since the Government urged them to leave their deposits in those banks, and is morally obligated to make good on the results of its urgings.

It is also a recovery measure of the highest importance, since it would stimulate purchasing power, and therefore employment, throughout the country.

Furthermore, there is no question that a majority in Congress would vote for it—if given the chance.

But the opponents of the bill have resorted to every parliamentary trick they can think up to delay and DEFEAT it.

REPRESENTATIVE McLEOD and others who advocate the measure are endeavoring to bring it out into the open for a vote at this session.

Every American who believes that the Government should do justice to the depositors in the closed banks and who also believes that it should aid recovery in this businesslike manner hopes that their efforts will be successful.

And any American who wishes to HELP toward the passage of the McLeod bill can do so by getting in touch with his Representative and Senator and demanding that it be brought to a vote.

If you feel that way about it, that is the thing for you to do, and to do IMMEDIATELY.

Jury Work a Duty

Twelve men, good and true, have consented to decide the fate of the Millens, Faber and the girl. Their wives are proud of them, and say so publicly.

The average woman cannot comprehend the reluctance of the average man to perform jury service. She regards such service as a moral as well as a legal duty of American citizenship. She performs a graver duty and accepts a more genuine risk as wife and mother, rearing the children who will be called to the jury tomorrow.

Judge Brown's thoughtful address at the opening of the case no doubt prevailed upon the talesmen to respond to their responsibility. The usual fictitious excuses for evasion of duty were abandoned.

Judge Beaudreau, only a few months ago, found it imperative to lecture a great corporation that had threatened to discharge an employe who had been drawn to the task and had readily accepted it. Fear of gang reprisals has intimidated prospective jurors in other cases, too numerous for the welfare of society.

Women jury service has been efficient elsewhere. The women may, at times, decide the cases on their personal intuition. But they display neither the cowardice nor diluted citizenship too evident among the males. And yet they are described as "the weaker sex."

Deathless Dickens

What must impress many readers who follow the first real romance of Charles Dickens, as revealed in his love letters now appearing in the Boston Evening American, is the perfection of expression which the author attained at so early an age. He knew what he desired to say and precisely how to say it.

He shows in the letters that the English language possesses strength, flexibility and color for any writer able to see through the simplicity of its grammar and vocabulary.

He has been called "the authors' author," but that title is unjustly pedantic. True, every line he wrote was a lesson in writing, but the lessons called for no study or explanation, and his words reproduced his thoughts with crystal clarity, comprehensible at sight to the commonest of men.

If proof were needed that Dickens' artistry was a gift God-given, the love letters supply that proof. They read as timely today as when they were written. Even as a youth, before he dreamed of the fame before him, even when writing informally for the eyes of a single person, he was a master—yes, THE master of letters!

New Optimism Abroad

Vice-President Russell announces that the New Haven Railroad on Sunday will considerably increase its passenger service.

The Bar Horbor Express and the Down Easter will double their service, in anticipation of heavier vacation travel.

Commuters' trains are to be restored after an absence of three or four years, the South Shore and the Cape will receive superior accommodations and all along the line there will be an extension or resumption of the services that were abandoned "in the dark days of depression."

Mr. Russell says these improvements are a healthy indication of increased railroad passenger business and, therefore, of improved business conditions generally.

Indeed they are. A new optimism is abroad among the people. Maybe the only deterrent to continued improvement lies in the fictitious restraints that may be imposed upon us from Washington.

Daylight Saving Good

Daylight saving time will begin on Sunday morning.

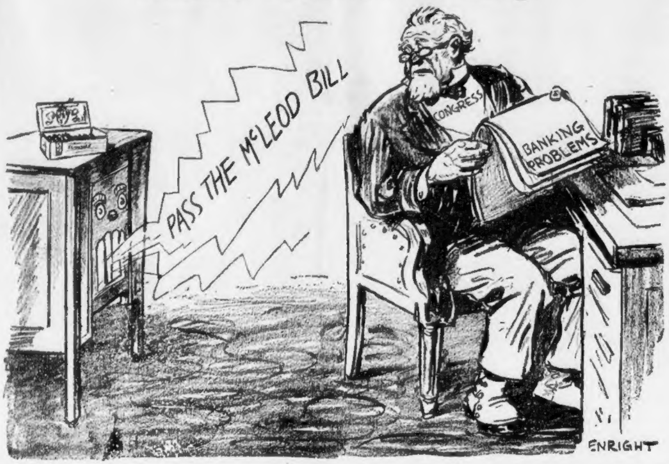
The benefits from it are so obvious that the once chronic complaints against it grow less with each new year of it.

The fact that some less-progressive States have failed as yet to adopt daylight saving and that their engagements with us are complicated by the hour's difference in time could never be of sufficient complaint to reject daylight saving.

We are enjoying an extra hour of the sunlight. Our health is probably improved, our opportunity for healthful and pleasurable recreation certainly has been increased.

If there is to be any change, our neighbors in the adjoining States should come along and share the benefits which we have made available to ourselves.

Station USA Now Talking!



Again, by a parliamentary ruse, a vote on the McLeod bill has been prevented in the House of Representatives, making it necessary for a new petition to be circulated demanding ACTION on May 14.

The McLeod bill recognizes that the depositors in closed banks belonging to the Federal Reserve System relied on Federal protectioin, and the Federal Government owes them a MORAL obligation.

The bill will permit the Government to take over the frozen assets of these banks, pay the depositors and gradually liquidate the assets.

As a recovery measure the benefits of such a procedure will be immediate and nationwide.

This constructive bill should PASS. Telegraph to YOUR Representative and urge him to support the McLeod bill.

Listen, World! -:- -:- Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

BUT HOW LONG IS IT SINCE YOU HELP ANYTHING TO HAPPEN? HOW LONG IS IT SINCE YOU HAD A NEW EXCITING THOUGHT OR FEELING ABOUT ANYTHING?

"But I'm having new thoughts and feelings all the time!" you protest, indignantly.

Are you? I wonder!

If you are, you're a rare human being. Most of us cease having new thoughts and feelings when we are still very young. Indeed, few of us ever start to do any original thinking or feeling—

If we were left to our own devices, as children, we would think and feel deeply about this amazing world. Children are naturally curious, naturally emotional—eager, enthusiastic, quick to rejoice or rebel.

But before we are out of creepers Papa, Mama and Organized Society lay holding hands upon us. We are told just what we should or shouldn't think about every subject—just what Nice Little Girls and Good Little Boys should or shouldn't feel. Before we have a chance to ask the questions, the answers are ready, all cut and dried.

AS A CONSEQUENCE, FEW OF US ARE PERMITTED TO WORK OUT OUR OWN NATURAL EMOTIONAL RESPONSES OR MENTAL ATTITUDES. We think and feel what the family thinks and feels; what our best friends think and feel We are little "yes men" and "yes women" before we've lost our baby teeth.

Of all this we're usually unconscious until we begin to develop. Then, at 13, 15, 17, we turn moody—decide we've "never been understood," decide to "live our own lives." And, for a while, we have a grand time hating, doubting and defying Everything and Everybody.

During those brief years before 20 most of us feel life more keenly than we ever will feel it again; most of us do our only REAL THINKING and REAL FEELING. Then, with 20, we are forced to face that life . . . and immediately we discover that it takes courage and tough perseverance to do one's own thinking and feeling.

For, unless you think and feel as the rest of the herd thinks and feels, many unpleasant things are apt to happen. Your family may raise Cain with you. Your friends will get sore at you. Your boss may fire you. The whole community will undoubtedly consider you a nut.

So what?

So, if you're the average lazy, cowardly, conceited human being, who loves peace and comfort at any cost, you speedily fall in line. You restrain restless curiosity and disturbing doubts, your inconvenient enthusiasms or rebellions, your distressing anguish over the cruelty of life. You say to yourself:

"Aw, what's the use of getting all hot and bothered? I can't change anything, no matter how hard I try. I'll just get myself laughed at—or start something I can't finish. Then everybody will blame me. What'll that buy me? Nothing but grief. So I'd better cut it out and stop working myself into a lather!"

So you fall in line. You stop thinking or feeling for yourself. You do not know you are ceasing to feel. To the contrary, you believe that you are feeling as much as ever—as much as anyone else—only YOU have decided to think and feel "practical, sensible things."

But the simple fact is, YOU HAVE STOPPED DOING ANY REAL THINKING OR FEELING. YOUR THOUGHTS AND FEELINGS HAVE BECOME HABITS—MEANINGLESS, AUTOMATIC HABITS.

The vast spectacle of life passes before you, with its thrilling challenges, its heart-breaking tragedies, and you believe that you regard it as you did once, when life was fresh and free.

But you don't! Your thoughts and feelings have become mechanical reactions. There is no more significance to them than there is to the unconscious gesture with which you brush away a fly from your nose.

Why are you bored? Why has life become stale? Why does "nothing happen any more?" That is why. You aren't letting anything happen. You are afraid to let anything happen. Life, for you, has become a series of gestures—meaningless mental and emotional gestures. YOU HAVE NO MORE REAL LIFE THAN ANY ROBOT.

Copyright, 1934, for the Boston Evening American

Once-Overs

It may be that the reason you have not met with more success is that you aimed too high.

Probably you have over-emphasized the old adage, "hitch your wagon to a star"; in other words, set the highest possible goal yourself.

It is silly for you to believe that you can do anything another person can achieve.

If you would realize how limited are your capabilities, and set your goal accordingly, you would get more satisfaction out of life.

Your education and environment, as well as your work-a-day position in the wheel of life, have much to do with the attaining of your goal.

Aiming beyond what one can do, and not being pleased with anything else—perhaps refusal to recognize another degree of success—have ruined the lives of many persons.

You might be a mighty, active frog in a small puddle, and that is probably where you belong—like the majority of us.

THE PERMANENT GAINS

Down through the years
I have struggled for what?
A few passing cheers
And food for the pot;
Warm raiment to wear,
Chunks of wood for the fire.
Now I wonder if there
Can be more to desire?

What of all that I've known
Do I cling to and boast?
What of all that I own
Do I treasure the most?
Time has swept much away
That I labored to gain,
But 'twas won for the day
And it couldn't remain.

There are trinkets made rare
By the love they recall;
Pictures old, of a pair
Now grown sturdy and tall;
A few simple things
Touched with pleasure or pain
To which memory clings,
And the rest was all vain.

The family glad
To be wearing my name;
The true friends I've had
Who have shared all that came.
An old easy chair
And a dog on the floor,
And what conquest or care

Congress Remiss in Duty To Expose Scandals

By James T. Williams, Jr.

When Woodrow Wilson was a young man, just out of college, he wrote a book on "Congressional Government," modestly describing it as "a study in American politics." It is all of that and more. It is a stimulating discussion of the American system of government.

Although this volume first appeared in 1885, many of its pages might well have been written about the present Congress, so little has the legislative branch of the federal government changed its sins of omission and commission in the last 50 years.

EYES OF THE NATION

It was Mr. Wilson's theory that Congress might, with advantages to the country, devote more time to investigate and less to legislative work. Of course, by investigation he did not mean the abuse of its investigating power by either house to publicize the chairman or members of an investigating committee.

Mr. Wilson looked upon Congress as a truly representative body, meant to be the eyes and the voice and to embody the wisdom and will of its constituents. Half a century ago he wrote:

"Unless Congress have and use every means of acquainting itself with the acts and the dispositions of the administrative agents of the government, the country must be helpless to learn how it is being served; and unless Congress both scrutinize these things and sift them by every form of discussion, the country must remain in embarrassing, crippling ignorance of the very affairs which it is most important that it should understand and direct."

The country has remained too long "in embarrassing, crippling ignorance of many vital public problems because recent Congresses have refused to prefer the informing function to their legislative function.

CHARGES UNPROVEN

A flagrant example of the evils that follow in the wake of acting first and investigating afterward is to be found in the wrecking of the federal airmail by the cancellation, without a hearing, of all domestic airmail contracts last February. This fatuous and indefensible blunder was instigated by a so-called Senate investigation which never rose to the dignity of an impartial and thorough committeq inquiry.

The cancellation of these contracts appears to have been instigated by several senators who made allegations of "fraud and collusion" which have yet to be proven either in or out of Congress.

Now the instigators of this blunder are asking Congress to base legislation, not upon facts developed by the kind of congressional investigation which Woodrow Wilson commended, but upon unproven allegations made in the midst of an inquiry ordered by the Senate, which has yet to be completed and will probably soon be abandoned.

No legislation will command the confidence of the public which is based upon unproven allegations of "collusion and fraud." Neither House of Congress can justify the expenditure of public money to finance a committee inquiry that flinches from finding all the facts available and following where the facts lead.

For this reason senators and representatives of both parties find themselves confused rather than enlightened by the unproven allegations made by a few members that all domestic air mail contracts were obtained by "collusion and fraud."

And because of this confusion, because a special committee of the Senate appointed to investigate and make findings in the light of the facts, has failed to discharge this duty, Congress may adjourn and leave to the executive branch the fair and fearless investigation of commercial aeronautics on which thousands of dollars have already been squandered by the Senate to no useful purpose.

CONGRESS FACES CHALLENGE

The next time Congress starts "to look diligently" into commercial aeronautics, alien intrigue, and seditious conspiracies, the evils of the lobby or any one of a dozen other public questions upon which the light of an honest and effective Congressional inquiry ought to be turned, this responsibility should be entrusted to a joint committee of the two Houses, carefully selected by the vice-president and the Speaker of the House.

The present Congress faces a challenge that can best be met by a joint investigating committee of the two Houses. This is the challenge of alien intriguers and their domestic dupes who are engaged in sapping expeditions to undermine the government of the constitution. All summer might profitably be spent by such a committee exploring the trail of this conspiracy.

Human Side of the News; Nature's Greatest Toll

By Edwin C. Hill

Night on the harbor at Waiyang, in the southernmost seacoast province of China. The hundreds of junks squat at anchor. A dead calm hangs over all—the barometer is falling and a heavy swell sets in on the water. Nature is warning before she strikes. But the fishermen pay little heed. Some have work to do and gamble they will have time to finish it. Others will match their skill, which must be great, considering the clumsy tubs they handle.

Suddenly a breeze stirs and grows in briskness. The rain comes down in torrents, the wind roars and the waters are lashed to a fury. An unseasonable typhoon has come to Waiyang, and before it runs its course, three hundred junks and sampans have been pounded to bits and eight hundred fishermen have perished. The typhoon of the East Indies is identical with the hurricane of the West Indies.

GETS SCANT NOTICE.

They occur usually in the months of August, September and October, originating in the equatorial belt of calms or doldrums, forming slowly and moving northward, slowly at first, until their pent-up wrath is loosed upon the West Indies, the Gulf and our Southern coast, and in the Pacific to play havoc between the Philippines and Japan. And their path runs from fifty to one hundred miles in width.

This last typhoon gets scant notice in the headlines, for in the measure of public interest eight hundred Chinese fishermen weigh but little.

The Pacific has about sixty typhoons a year, ten of which are serious, and the Atlantic has about one-third that number of hurricanes. All in all, they are the most destructive of nature's forces, drowning as many as one hundred persons at one time, and in the Tokio earthquake and typhoon of September 1, 1923, being responsible, it is estimated, for 200,000 of the 300,000 deaths by spreading the flames.

THREE OF 100,000

To punish the Japanese for executing an ambassador, this Grand Mongol loaded one hundred thousand men on 3500 ships for an invasion of the empire of the Nipponese. A typhoon struck the armada as it lay at anchor off the island of Kiushiu and just three of the 100,000 returned alive to China. Down through the centuries, year after year, the typhoon, or hurricane, takes the greatest toll of any of the manifestations of the wrath of nature.

Now it is the Basques who have the bee of independence in their berets. They are adding a voice to Europe's symphony of discord, and their note is that they are sick and tired of the instability of government and shifting of political lines, especially in Spain and incidentally in France. As a result, they have ordered one hundred airplanes in Czecho-Slovakia and a batch of machine guns for the training of their young fellows, all in case of eventualities not to their liking.

FARMERS AND SAILORS

A strange people the Basques—one of the strangest on the face of the earth. Your guess is as good as mine, or the next one's, as to whence they sprang. Some ethnologists trace them back to the Phoenician traders, others link them with the Georgians of the Caucasus, and still others believe them to be survivors of the ten lost tribes of Israel.

Be that as it may, they speak a language which is both unintelligible and unpronounceable, like none other—although a Japanese can understand a few words and the Celts can see a strain of Gaelic in their music.

Farmers and seafarers, they have—since time immemorial—been holding forth along what is now the Franco-Spanish frontier, living their own lives, and keeping their blood strain pure, on the shores of the Bay of Biscay and back in the Cantabrian and Pyrennees mountains.

Six hundred thousand of them remain there, four hundred and fifty thousand in Spain, and one hundred and fifty thousand in France. Still another thousand are to be found, mostly in the La Plata section of South America and some in our own southwest.

TWO GREAT BASQUES

Everywhere—uncanny in their knowledge of the breeding and care of sheep. They tend their flocks, drive their oxen, wear their picturesque clothes, live in their ancient pueblos with narrow streets and gabled houses, watching sleek motorcars and airplanes go by, just as their forbears did ten centuries ago, when it was Moslems and Visigoths who went by.

However, the Basque today is not bent on repelling visitors as perforce his ancestors were. Strangers are not welcome, but when they come, they find the Basque hospitable, courteous and willing to discuss the affairs of the world. They find a proud race, and why not? Since the Kings of Castille had ordained that every Basque was a nobleman.

The visitor sees, too, in the bold eyes and handsome features of his host, that faraway, indefinable look of the mystic, a quality of mind and soul which was so pronounced in those two great Basques—Ignatius Loyala and Ferdinand Foch.
